Class 25 (November 28): Nonhorizontal mergers

Last Tuesday (Class 24) we jumped ahead to vertical mergers in order to look at the complaint filed the day before against the AT&T/Time Warner deal. Vertical mergers were supposed to be the topic for Class 25. Don't think that you are off the hook on the reading. I have revised the class notes on vertical mergers and you should give them a careful read. If you can, read one or two of the vertical case studies in the reading materials, but those are not nearly as important as the class notes.

This coming Tuesday we will cover mergers that eliminate potential competition. This was the original topic for Class 24, so you should have already done the reading. If you have, I still suggest that you read the summary of the topic in the Class 24 reading guidance and take a quick look again at the class notes.

If we finish potential competition before the end of class, we will return to look at some short horizontal case studies. That hopefully will leave all of Class 26 (Thursday) for a review of the course and some discussion about exam strategies and any questions you have. For those of you who are interested, there will be an optional review session on Monday (12/4), although I do not have a time or a room yet. I will chase that down on Monday.

I hope that you are all enjoying your short (but probably much needed) vacation. See you Tuesday. Please write me if you have any questions about the materials.
