Remedies Risk: Blocking/Restructuring the Deal

Possible outcomes in DOJ/FTC reviews

Close investigation

- Waiting period terminates at the end of the investigation with the agency taking no enforcement action, or
- Agency grants early termination prior to normal expiration

Litigate

- DOJ: Seeks preliminary and permanent injunctive relief in federal district court
- FTC: Seeks preliminary injunctive relief in federal district court
Seeks permanent injunctive relief in administrative trial

Settle w/consent decree

- Typical resolution for problematic mergers
- DOJ: Consent decree entered by federal district court
- FTC: Consent order entered by FTC in administrative proceeding

Parties terminate transaction

- Parties will not settle at the agency's ask and will not litigate, or
- Agency concludes that no settlement will resolve the agency's concerns and the parties will not litigate
 - Examples: AT&T/T-Mobile, NASDAQ/NYSE Euronext

Non-DOJ/FTC challenges

■ Parties

- As we have seen, other parties may have standing to challenge a transaction under the private rights of actions contained in the antitrust laws:
 - State attorneys general
 - Customers
 - Competitors

■ Forum

- These challengers must seek relief from a federal district court¹
- Technically, the process is the same as for a DOJ injunctive relief action
 - NB: Injured parties may also have standing to seek treble damages relief where the transaction has closed

¹ Parties may also seek relief in state court for violations of state antitrust law. This is very rare in practice and we will not consider merger antitrust actions in state court in this course.

Non-DOJ/FTC challenges

■ Frequency

□ States

- State AGs often join with the DOJ or FTC in challenging a deal that they believe has a significant anticompetitive effect in their state
 - Federal agency typically carries the load in the investigation and litigation
 - Although states may be some effect on the relief sought when it has a particularized effect in their jurisdiction
- State AGS rarely bring their own merger antitrust actions
 - Although some states are saying that they will step up their own merger enforcement actions if the DOJ and FTC in the Trump administration become too lenient

□ Customers and competitors

- Very infrequently bring challenges
 - Merger challenges are extremely expensive to prosecute given the requirement of showing a reasonably probable anticompetitive effect in a relevant market
 - There are no damages if the challenge is to a transaction that has not yet closed
 - Empirically, courts rarely grant injunctive or damages relief to nongovernment plaintiffs (especially when the transaction has been reviewed by the DOJ/FTC under the HSR Act and either “cleared” without enforcement action or restructured to eliminate the alleged anticompetitive problem through a consent decree)¹

¹ There are exceptions. See, e.g., Boardman v. Pac. Seafood Grp., No. 1:15-108-CL, 2015 WL 13357739 (D. Or. Mar. 6, 2015) (entering preliminary injunction), aff'd, 822 F.3d 1011 (9th Cir. 2016)

Merger Antitrust Litigation

Introduction

■ Setting

- To block the closing of the transaction after the waiting period has expired, the DOJ, FTC, or other party any party opposing the transaction must obtain an injunction

■ Preliminary injunctions

- Neither the DOJ nor the FTC has the power to issue a preliminary injunction
- Must obtain a preliminary injunction from a federal district court
 - DOJ: Cause of action for preliminary injunctive relief under Clayton Act § 15
 - FTC: Cause of action for preliminary injunctive relief under FTC Act § 13(b)
 - Private parties: Cause of action for preliminary injunctive relief under Clayton Act § 16

■ Permanent injunctions

- DOJ: Must obtain permanent injunction relief from a federal district court
 - Cause of action for permanent injunctive relief under Clayton Act § 15
 - Court, with agreement of the parties, can consolidate the preliminary injunction hearing with the trial on the merits under Rule 65(a)(2) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure
- FTC:
 - May adjudicate the merits in an administrative proceeding and enter a permanent injunction (called a “cease and desist order”) under FTC Act § 5
 - May also adjudicate the merits in federal district court and obtain a permanent injunction under FTC Act § 13(b)—Very rarely used

Merger antitrust litigation

Plaintiff	Trial Forum	Appeal
DOJ	Federal district court	Court of appeals
FTC
–Preliminary inj.	Federal district court	Court of appeals
–Permanent inj.	FTC administrative trial	Full commission, then any court of appeals with venue
State AGs*	Federal district court	Court of appeals
Private parties*	Federal district court	Court of appeals

* May bring state claims in state court or join state claims in federal court

Types of injunctions in merger cases

Injunction type	Relief ordered
Temporary restraining order (TRO)	Maintain status quo pending decision on a preliminary injunction
Preliminary injunction	Premerger: Blocking injunctions (not hold separate) pending a final decision on the merits Postmerger: Hold separate/preserve assets for divestiture Recission in the right case
Permanent injunction	Premerger: Blocking injunction Postmerger: Divestiture (recission in one case)

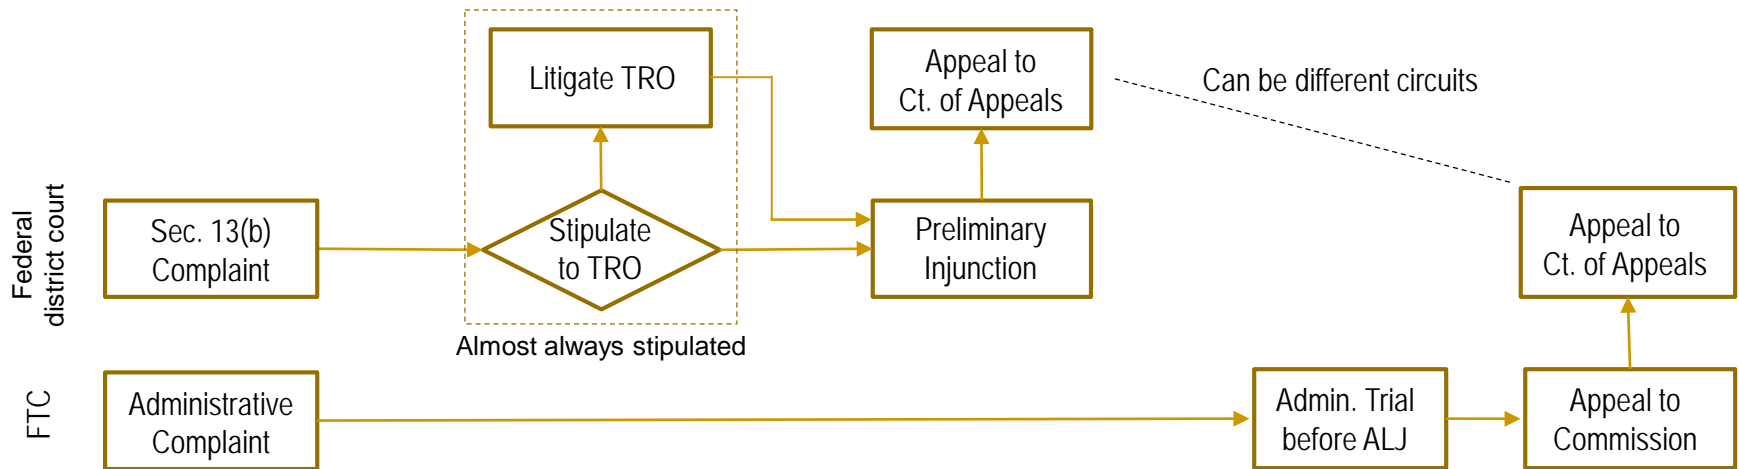

NB: Since actions for injunctive relief sound in equity, they are tried to the court, not to a jury

Typical litigation paradigms

DOJ preclosing challenge

FTC preclosing challenge

Typical litigation paradigms

DOJ postclosing challenge

FTC postclosing challenge

Litigation timing

■ Some initial observations

- Litigation timing can be critical in deals that have yet to be consummated
 - The acquisition agreement will specify a “drop-dead date”—that is, the date on which either party can terminate the agreement unilaterally and without cause
 - If the deal is not closed by the drop-dead date, there is a risk that one of the parties may walk away or seek to renegotiate the terms of the transaction (especially the purchase price) as an inducement to stay in the deal
 - For this reason, the business people need a good sense of the timing in order to understand what they should be seeking (and what they might be giving up) in negotiating for a specific drop-dead date in the acquisition agreement
- The DOJ/FTC typically will not continue litigation on the merits if they are denied a preliminary injunction (although the agency might appeal an adverse PI decision)
 - DOJ has not continued on the merits after losing a PI since 1980
 - FTC, which had consistently continued litigation until 1995, when it discontinued the practice for the most part
- Unaware of any case in the last 40 years where the merging parties have proceeded to a full trial when a preliminary injunction has been granted blocking the closing pending a final adjudication of the merits

Litigation timing

- WDC views on timing for preclosing challenges

Proceeding	Plaintiff	Formum	Likely timing
Preliminary injunction	DOJ or FTC	Federal district court	6.5 months from filing of the complaint
Appeal from the grant or denial of a PI	DOJ or FTC	Federal court of appeals	Likely to be granted expedited treatment, in which case six months
Full trial on the merits	DOJ	Federal district court	Typically consolidated with PI hearing under Rule 65(a)(2)
Administrative trial on the merits	FTC	FTC administrative law judge (ALJ)	Nine months from issuance of administrative complaint
Appeal from the administrative trial	FTC	Full FTC
Appeal from an FTC decision on the merits	FTC	Federal court of appeal	One year or more

Contrasts between the DOJ and FTC

- Authority
 - DOJ
 - Purely a prosecutorial agency
 - FTC
 - Both prosecutes and adjudicates

Contrasts between the DOJ and FTC

■ Adjudicators

□ DOJ actions

- Same district court judge decides preliminary injunction and merits/permanent injunction
- Appeal to the federal court of appeals in the circuit containing the district court
- Appellate standard: Abuse of discretion

□ FTC actions

- District court judge only decides preliminary injunction—has no further involvement in the merger challenge
- ALJ (an FTC employee) decides permanent injunction
- Initial appeal lies to the full Commission—usually most if not all of the same five people who voted out the complaint
- Appeal to any federal court of appeals with venue
- Appellate standard:²
 - Legal conclusions: De novo
 - Factual findings: Substantial evidence rule—regarded as very deferential
 - Substantial evidence is evidence that “a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion.”³
 - 15 U.S.C. § 45(c) provides that “[t]he findings of the Commission as to the facts, if supported by evidence, shall be conclusive.”

² ProMedica Health Sys., Inc. v. FTC, No. 12-3583, at 7 (6th Cir. Apr. 22, 2014).

³ Id. (quoting Realcomp II, Ltd. v. FTC, 635 F.3d 815, 824 (6th Cir. 2011))

Contrasts between the DOJ and FTC

- Consolidation under FRCP 65(a)(2)
 - DOJ: Will consent to consolidating preliminary injunction hearing with trial on the merits
 - FTC: Never consents to consolidation—always insists on separate administrative trial and appeal to the full Commission
- Rules of procedure and evidence
 - DOJ:
 - Must follow the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure and the Federal Rules of Evidence applicable to all federal court proceedings
 - FTC
 - Follows the FTC Rules of Practice
 - Do not incorporate FRCP or FRE
 - E.g., do not adopt limitations on the number of interrogatories or the length of depositions
- Preliminary injunction standard
 - Arguably lower threshold in FTC Section 13(b) proceedings than in DOJ Section 15 proceedings (discussed below)

Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc.¹

- Seminal Supreme Court case on preliminary injunctions
- “A preliminary injunction is an extraordinary remedy never awarded as of right.”²
- Winter test

A [private] plaintiff seeking a preliminary injunction must establish [1] that he is likely to succeed on the merits, [2] that he is likely to suffer irreparable harm in the absence of preliminary relief, [3] that the balance of equities tips in his favor, and [4] that an injunction is in the public interest.³

- Sliding scale
 - Prior to Winter, many courts held that the four factors could be balanced on a sliding scale, so that, for example, a weak showing of likelihood of success could be offset by a strong showing of irreparable harm
 - Post-Winter, some courts have rejected the sliding scale, holding that Winter requires a likelihood of success on the merits as an independent, free-standing requirement for a preliminary injunction

² Id. at 24.

³ Id. at 20.

Winter v. Natural Res. Def. Council, Inc.

- DOJ/FTC challenges
 - Irreparable harm is presumed to result if the law is violated
 - Other cases hold that the element of irreparable harm is simply not part of the test when the government is the plaintiff and is seeking to prevent a violation of law
 - Balance of the equities
 - The public equities when there is a likelihood of success on the merits
 - The public interest in effectively enforcing the antitrust laws
 - In addition for a preliminary injunction: The public interest in ensuring that effective relief may be ordered if the government succeeds at the trial on the merits
 - The public equities almost always outweigh any private equity
 - Therefore, the critical factor when the government seeks a preliminary injunction is the requisite likelihood of success on the merits

Temporary restraining orders (TROs)

- Emergency interim relief a court may enter to maintain the status quo pending a fuller hearing on a motion for a preliminary injunction
 - May be used to block the imminent closing of a challenged merger
 - Initiated by motion (usually filed simultaneously with the complaint) accompanied by a request to see the judge immediately

- Ex parte entry¹
 - May be entered ex parte (without notice or participation by the adverse party) if—
 - immediate and irreparable injury will result before the adverse party can be heard in opposition, and
 - the movant sought to give notice to the adverse party or there are good reasons why notice could not be given
 - In merger antitrust cases—
 - Immediate and irreparable injury will be threatened if the transaction will close and will be difficult to unwind postclosing (almost a presumption)
 - BUT as a practical matter the merging parties and their counsel are always available to appear to oppose the TRO
 - So TROs are never entered ex parte in government merger antitrust cases

Temporary restraining orders (TROs)

■ Duration¹

□ Standard

- Not to exceed 14 calendar days
- May be extended for good cause by the court for an additional 14 calendar days
- The parties may agree on a longer extension (stipulated TRO)

□ Short duration is the safeguard to the lack of higher standards

- Absent consent, if of a longer duration TRO will be treated as a preliminary injunction and must conform to the more rigorous preliminary injunction standards²

■ Standard

□ The standard for issuing a temporary restraining order is the same as the standard for issuing a preliminary injunction³

- If issued ex parte, efforts to give notice also may be taken into account

□ But the respective harms to the parties and the public interest will be assessed in light of very limited duration of the TRO (as opposed through the end of the trial on the merits for a preliminary injunction)

² Sampson v. Murray 415 U.S. 61, 86 & n.58 (1974); accord United Airlines, Inc. v. U.S. Bank, N.A., 406 F.3d 918, 923 (7th Cir. 2005).

³ United States v. Tribune Publ'g Co., No. CV1601822AB (PJWX), 2016 WL 2989488, at *1 (C.D. Cal. Mar. 18, 2016) (entering TRO in newspaper merger case).

Temporary restraining orders (TROs)

- Rarely employed in modern merger antitrust practice
 - Judges strongly dislike the timing pressures of a TRO and believe that the litigating parties should be able to agree on a scheduling order that will—
 - Permit the merging parties to take all necessary discovery on an expedited basis prior to the preliminary injunction hearing
 - HSR-reportable transaction: If the investigating agency has done its job properly, it should not need additional discovery (BTW the agency almost always disagrees)
 - Non-HSR reportable transaction: Likely that both sides will require discovery
 - Include a stipulation not to close the transaction until the motion for a preliminary injunction is decided
 - Since same judge will decide preliminary injunction, usually unwise to be the party responsible for not reaching an agreement

Preliminary injunctions

- Purpose
 - To maintain the status quo ex ante until a final decision on the merits
 - In merger antitrust law, this usually means a blocking preliminary injunction if the transaction has not yet closed
 - Modern courts have held that “hold separate” injunctions, which allow the deal to close but require merged parties to be operated separately and not integrated, are usually regarded as inadequate relief

Preliminary injunctions

■ Deal realities

- Moreover, a transaction is unlikely to survive as a business matter the time it would take for both a preliminary injunction and a subsequent trial on the merits
 - Most deals start to flounder if they have not closed within a year of signing
 - A HSR merger view is likely to take 6-8 months
 - Little time left practically for a trial and an appeal
- Federal judges in the District of Columbia recognize the time sensitivity of deals and usually give the parties the opportunity on a very expedited basis to present a complete case in the preliminary injunction proceeding
 - Usually includes 3-6 days of evidentiary hearings for live witnesses
 - Trade-off: Due to court schedules, the more trial days the parties want the more delayed the hearing

■ Other observations

- The DOJ/FTC need only show a likelihood of success on the merits for a preliminary injunction
- This is a lower standard than the actual success on the merits required for a permanent injunction

Preliminary injunctions

- Implications—DOJ actions
 - Merging parties seek to avoid separate a stand-alone preliminary injunction proceeding by stipulating to a PI in return for an accelerated trial on the merits
 - Advantages for merging parties
 - Results in the use of the “actual success on the merits” standard, and
 - Shortens the time to get a trial on the merits
 - May sacrifice some trial days to get earlier calendar date
 - May consolidate preliminary injunction hearing with trial on the merits under FRCP 65(a)(2)
 - DOJ practice is to consent (provided it obtains enough trial days to present case)
 - Recognizes that discovery will be complete before the PI hearing
 - Recognizes that judges (in D.D.C.) expect a full merits case to be presented even in a preliminary injunction proceeding, that they do not want two evidentiary proceedings, and that they are unlikely to reach a different conclusion in a full merits proceeding¹

¹ See, e.g., United States v. Gillette Co., 828 F. Supp. 78, 86 n.12 (D.D.C. 1993) (“Despite the limited time involved, both parties have provided the court with a remarkably complete and detailed record; in fact, the record is more complete than many cases are after trial. Thus, the court feels confident in reaching its conclusion that plaintiff is not likely to succeed on the merits after a full trial, should a full trial ever occur in this case.”)

Preliminary injunctions

- Implications—FTC actions
 - Merging party incentives
 - Merging parties have the same incentives to avoid separate a stand-alone preliminary injunction proceeding and to proceed on an “actual success” standard
 - BUT FTC will not cooperate
 - Will not consent to consolidation of preliminary injunction hearing and trial on the merits under FRCP 65(a)(2)
 - Insists that statutory scheme indicates a strong congressional intent that the FTC to try the case on the merits in its own administrative proceeding
 - Federal courts have exhibited no willingness to consolidate over FTC opposition
 - Likes to litigate under the Section 13(b) standard (see below)
 - Cannot be pressured by federal court
 - The federal judge’s only role is to conduct the Section 13(b) proceeding
 - The federal judge will have no involvement in the trial on the merits

Preliminary injunctions

- Implications—FTC actions (con't)
 - Consequences
 - FTC has incentive to seek a very quick preliminary injunction hearing date to minimize ability of merging parties to take adequate discovery, prepare expert testimony, and make a complete case in the Section 13(b) proceeding
 - FTC believes that a strong win in the Section 13(b) proceeding will dissuade the parties from pursuing litigation on the merits in a post-PI administrative proceeding given the long length of time to litigate to conclusion on the merits (including an appeal) and the nature of the forum (the same commissioners that voted out the complaint will hear any appeal from the initial decision by the administrative law judge)
 - Also, by the end of an HSR merger review, the FTC staff should have completed discovery for its affirmative case, while the merging parties have no opportunity for third-party discovery until a complaint has been filed.
 - Merging parties has incentive to litigate the Section 13(b) PI if they believe they can make a strong evidentiary showing and obtain a denial of the PI by a (neutral) federal judge, so as to incentivize the FTC to dismiss the administrative complaint as futile
 - But may stipulate to a PI and avoid a Section 13(b) decision if the time available to prepare is too short to take adequate discovery and prepare experts or if there are other reasons that make it likely that the merging parties will lose (e.g., a judge who is apparently unsympathetic or unsophisticated in complex antitrust litigation)

Preliminary injunction standard

■ DOJ

- Clayton Act § 15: Authorizes the district courts in antitrust cases brought by the Attorney General to “make such temporary restraining order or prohibition as shall be deemed just in the premises.”¹
- Test: Traditional four-factor test in private actions:
 - Likelihood of the plaintiff’s success on the merits
 - Threat of irreparable injury to the plaintiff in the absence of the injunction
 - Possibility of substantial harm to other interested parties from a grant of injunctive relief
 - Interest of the public
- DOJ does not have to show irreparable harm
- Likelihood of success key
 - Usually requires a showing that there is a “reasonable probability of success at trial”
 - Some older decisions require only that the case “raise questions going to the merits which are so substantial and complex as to warrant ... maintaining the status quo until they have been resolved.”
 - Courts give lip service to other factors, but rather if ever important in DOJ cases
- Type of relief
 - Blocking preliminary injunction
 - “Hold separate” injunctions that allow the deal to close are regarded as insufficient

Preliminary injunction standard

■ FTC

- FTC Act § 13(b): Authorizes the district court to enjoin consummation of a merger pending completion of an FTC administrative adjudication “[u]pon a proper showing that, weighing the equities and considering the Commission's likelihood of ultimate success, such action would be in the public interest.”¹
 - No requirement to show irreparable harm
- Test: “Serious questions”

The issue is whether the Commission has demonstrated a likelihood of ultimate success. The Commission meets its burden if it “raise[s] questions going to the merits so serious, substantial, difficult and doubtful as to make them fair ground for thorough investigation, study, deliberation and determination by the FTC in the first instance and ultimately by the Court of Appeals.”²

□ Application

- While the law recognizes FTC as an “expert agency” that (in principle) is entitled to some deference, most courts in practice appear to hold the FTC to the same standard as the DOJ (a “likelihood of success on the merits”) even if they do not explicitly say so
- Query: Is a question “serious” only if the evidence shows a likelihood of success on the merits?

² FTC v. Warner Commc'ns, 742 F.2d 1156, 1162 (9th Cir. 1984) (collecting citations); accord FTC v. Whole Foods Mkt., Inc., 548 F.3d 1028, 1035 (D.C. May 17, 2016); FTC v. CCC Holdings, Inc., 605 F. Supp. 2d 26, 30 (D.D.C. 2009).

Preliminary injunction standard

■ Private parties

□ Clayton Act § 16

- Provides private persons (including states) with a right of action to "sue for and have injunctive relief ... when and under the same conditions and principles as injunctive relief against threatened conduct that will cause loss or damage is granted by courts of equity."¹

- Interpreted to include TROs and preliminary injunctions as well as permanent injunctions

□ Test: Same as DOJ + immediate threat of irreparable harm

- Irreparable harm is harm no remediable by damages

- Courts typically find that harm is not irreparable → Damages are sufficient

- But some cases hold that a harm resulting from a lessening of competition is a irreparable harm²

- Query: Which is the proper reading in a private case?

- Threat of irreparable harm must be immediate

- Means that the plaintiff "is likely to suffer irreparable harm before a decision on the merits can be rendered."³

- Also requires actual or threatened antitrust injury and prudential standing

- The equities and the public interest count in the analysis (although still secondary to likelihood of success on the merits)

² See, e.g., Boardman v. Pacific Seafood Grp., 822 F.3d 1011, 1022 (9th Cir. 2016).

³ Winter, 555 U.S. at 22.

Preliminary injunction standard

- Private parties (con't)
 - Type of relief
 - While private parties can obtain preliminary injunctive relief, courts are reluctant to grant it
 - Especially true when deal has been challenged and settled by the DOJ or FTC
 - There are exceptions¹
 - Courts typically find that harm is not irreparable → Damages are sufficient

Preliminary injunction—Appeals

■ Appeal

- The grant or denial of a motion for a preliminary injunction is immediately appealable as a matter of right under 28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)(1):

[T]he courts of appeals shall have jurisdiction of appeals from: (1) Interlocutory orders of the district courts of the United States . . . or of the judges thereof, granting, continuing, modifying, refusing or dissolving injunctions, or refusing to dissolve or modify injunctions, except where a direct review may be had in the Supreme Court;

- The standard of review is abuse of discretion
 - Review legal conclusions de novo
 - Review factual findings for clear error

Permanent injunctions

- Identical to usual federal court preliminary injunction standard
 - EXCEPT that a permanent injunction requires actual success on the merits¹
 - Success on the merits requires proof by the preponderance of the evidence
 - Also, the record for a decision on a permanent injunction may be more developed if additional discovery and briefing have occurred since the preliminary injunction hearing

- Factual findings in the preliminary injunction hearing
 - Not binding
 - BUT unlikely to be overturned in the absence of new evidence

Appeals

Appeals

- Jurisdiction
 - Courts of appeal must be assigned jurisdiction by statute in order to hear an appeal
- Jurisdiction in three types of appeal
 - Appeals of final judgments
 - Appeals of the grant or denial of injunctive relief
 - Interlocutory appeals certified for appellate review by the district court and accepted by review by the court of appeals

Appeals

- Appeals of final judgments—28 U.S.C. § 1291
 - Courts of appeal have appellate jurisdiction over all “final decisions” of the district courts¹
 - Once a final judgment is reached, the appellate court has jurisdiction to review all district court orders in the litigation that preceded the judgment²
 - Matter of right
 - Appeals of final judgment are available as a matter of right
 - An appeal of a final judgment is initiated by the filing of a notice of appeal in the district court³
 - When other avenues of interlocutory appeal are not available, in some circumstances a party may ask the court to enter a final judgment against it, which then would be appealable⁴
 - Key is for the party not to consent to the adverse judgment or dismiss the action—for that would waive its right to appeal—but rather seek a final judgment from the court as opposed to an interlocutory order

² Quackenbush v. Allstate Ins. Co., 517 U.S. 706, 710 (1996).

³ Fed. R. App. P. 3.

⁴ United States v. Procter & Gamble Co., 356 U.S. 677, 985-86 (1958).

Appeals

- Appeals of final judgments—28 U.S.C. § 1291
 - Entry of final judgment
 - Timing
 - To bring an appeal, a notice of appeal must be filed within
 - 30 days of entry of the final judgment¹
 - Exception: 60 days from entry of final judgment where the United States is a party²
 - Under very limited circumstances, the district court may reopen the time to file an appeal for a period of 14 days after the date when its order to reopen is entered³
 - Timing requirements are jurisdictional⁴

² Id. § 2107(b).

³ Fed. R. App. P. 4(a)(6).

⁴ Bowles v. Russell, 551 U.S. 205 (2007).

Appeals

- Appeals of the grant or denial of injunctive relief—28 U.S.C. § 1292(a)
 - Courts of appeals have appellate jurisdiction over interlocutory orders of the district courts

granting, continuing, modifying, refusing or dissolving injunctions, or refusing to dissolve or modify injunctions, except where a direct review may be had in the Supreme Court¹

Appeals

- Certified interlocutory appeals—28 U.S.C. § 1292(b)
 - Background
 - Section 1292(b) appeals were intended, and should be reserved, for situations in which the court of appeals can rule on a pure, controlling question of law without having to delve beyond the surface of the record in order to determine the facts¹
 - “The antithesis of a proper § 1292(b) appeal is one that turns on whether there is a genuine issue of fact or whether the district court properly applied settled law to the facts or evidence of a particular case.”²

Appeals

- Certified interlocutory appeals—28 U.S.C. § 1292(b)
 - Appeals of interlocutory orders are not as of right
 - Certification: Two-tiered screening procedure—
 - District court: Appellate jurisdiction exists when the district court in a civil action certifies an interlocutory order for immediate appeal where the court determines that—
 1. the order involves a controlling question of law
 2. as to which there is substantial ground for difference of opinion, and
 3. that an immediate appeal from the order may materially advance the ultimate termination of the litigation¹
 - Court of appeals: Discretionary with appellate court
 - District court's certification only provides the court of appeals with jurisdiction to hear the appeal
 - Certification does not require the appellate court to accept the appeal
 - Courts rarely apply Section 1292(b)
 - Strong policy disfavor of piecemeal appeals
 - Discretionary veto on the part of both the district court and the court of appeals,

² Katz v. Carte Blanche Corp, 496 F.2d 747, 755 (3d Cir. 1974).

Appeals

- Certified interlocutory appeals—28 U.S.C. § 1292(b)
 - Certification
 - Controlling question of law—Exists if either:
 - an incorrect application of the law would constitute reversible error if presented on final appeal, or
 - the question of law is “serious to the conduct of the litigation either practically or legally”¹
 - Substantial ground for difference of opinion—Exists when:
 - controlling authority fails to resolve the question of law, and
 - there is grounds for genuine doubt as to the proper legal standard
 - Material advancement of litigation—Exists if an immediate appeal could either:
 - eliminate the need for a trial, simplify the case by foreclosing complex issues, or
 - enable the parties to complete discovery more quickly or less expensively
 - Certification decision lies in the discretion of the district court
 - Court may decline to certify an order even if the parties have satisfied all of the statutory requirements
 - PLUS court of appeals has discretion to hear or decline to hear a certified interlocutory appeal

² In re Text Messaging Antitrust Litig., 630 F.3d 622, 624 (7th Cir. 2010) (accepting certified interlocutory appeal on the sufficiency of a complaint under Twombly).

Appeals

- Certified interlocutory appeals—28 U.S.C. § 1292(b)
 - Effect on district court jurisdiction
 - If a Section 1292(b) appeal is accepted by the court of appeals, then the district court will be deprived of jurisdiction over the order certified (and presumably related subject matter) unless the appeal is decided.

Appeals

- Standards of review
 - Interpretation of the law—De novo
 - No deference provided to the district court
 - Applies to—
 - Legal standards used to decide motions
 - Legal standards to decide merits in a bench trial
 - Jury instructions
 - Judgment as a Matter of Law (JMOL)

² Id. at 573-74.

³ Id. at 574.

⁴ Id. at 575.

Appeals

■ Standards of review

□ Finding of facts in a bench trial—Clearly erroneous rule

- A factual finding is clearly erroneous “when, although there is evidence to support it, the reviewing court on the entire evidence is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed”¹
 - Does not entitle reviewing court to reverse finding of trier of fact simply because it is convinced that it would have decided case differently²
 - When there are two permissible views of the evidence, the factfinder’s choice between them cannot be clearly erroneous³
 - When findings are based on determinations regarding the credibility of witnesses, even greater deference to the trial court’s findings is required⁴
- Applies to—
 - Facts found in a bench trial
 - Expert testimony relied upon by the finder of fact
 - Mixed questions of law and fact

² Id. at 573-74.

³ Id. at 574.

⁴ Id. at 575.

Appeals

■ Standards of review

- Findings of fact by a jury—Substantial evidence rule
 - Applies whether findings are explicit or implicit within the verdict
 - Means "such relevant evidence as a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion."¹
 - Must view the evidence in the light most favorable to the prevailing party and draw all reasonable inferences in favor of the prevailing party
- Matters in the trial court's of discretion—Abuse of discretion
 - Occurs when court:
 - Adopts an incorrect legal rule
 - Relies upon a factor not legally cognizable under a proper legal rule
 - Omits consideration of a factor entitled to substantial weight under the proper legal rule
 - Makes a clear error in weighing the factors, or
 - rests its conclusions on clearly erroneous factual determinations.
 - Applies to (examples)—
 - Evidentiary rulings (including Daubert motions)
 - Class action decisions

Appeals

- Division of jurisdiction between appellate court and trial court
 - An appeal as a matter of right in a civil case is triggered by the filing of a notice of appeal in the district court¹
 - Normally, must be filed with 30 days after the entry of judgment of the order being appealed
 - If the United States or a U.S. agency is a party, then the time is 60 days
 - The filing of a notice of appeal—
 1. confers jurisdiction on the court of appeals, and
 2. divests the district court of its control over those aspects of the case involved in the appeal
 - The filing of the mandate by the court of appeals returns jurisdiction to the district court²
 - Think of the mandate as the judgment of the appellate court
 - Filing a petition for a writ of certiorari to the U.S. Supreme Court does not automatically stay the mandate
 - But provides a common basis for the appellate court to issue a stay³
