11/06/2015		MINUTE ORDER. The parties are in disagreement about the confidential treatment, whether Complete or Partial Non-Disclosure, over a voluminous number of exhibits. Many of the exhibits in dispute are hundreds of pages long. The Court's initial review of the exhibits in dispute indicates that the Government's redactions are often under inclusive and the Defendants' redactions are often over inclusive. For example, PX00305 and PX00697 will likely be given Complete Non-Disclosure status, as the power points set forth Electrolux's strategic direction and strategies. However, PX00674 is not deserving of Complete Non-Disclosure status. The power point discusses data from 2013 and before and much of what Defendants are likely to argue is strategic is too generic to have true strategic value. Also, it appears that much of the sales information included in many of the exhibits that Defendants seek to redact is information already accessible to the public. Although insightful, the Court's review does not obviate the need for argument from the parties. And, given the number of the exhibits and the nature of the parties' disputes, it is unclear how an exhibit-by-exhibit review can be avoided. Thus, the parties are hereby ordered to further meet and confer today, prior to the 3:00 p.m. status hearing, about the exhibits in dispute that will be used during the first week of trial. If no additional compromises can be reached, the parties shall be prepared to present brief argument about each exhibit in dispute that will be used during the first week of trial. Any exhibits that Defendants plan to use on cross examination that are not already disclosed to Plaintiff and the Court shall be produced forthwith. The Court will utilize the hard copies provided by Defendants and the Government shall utilize the Courtroom technology to project its proposed redactions for the exhibits in dispute. The Courtroom shall be closed to the public for the duration of the hearing that discusses the exhibits in dispute. The Court plans to spend approximately 1 - 1.5 hours ruling on exhibits in dispute. The Court intends that its rulings will inform the parties' further meet and confer sessions over the weekend to resolve other disputes. Absent additional compromises by the parties, the time required to address the confidentiality disputes will in all likelihood extend the time estimated by the parties to complete this trial. Signed by Judge Emmet G. Sullivan on November 6, 2015. (lcegs4) (Entered: 11/06/2015)

11/13/2015		MINUTE ORDER. Upon consideration of the Defendants' 295 Motion for Clarification and the Government's response, Defendants' motion is granted as follows: witnesses may discuss 2015 Black Friday Season sales' forecasts and another future sales' predictions. Witnesses shall not discuss specific real-time sales information from Home Depot. The real-time sales information Defendants wish to discuss is from only one of the major retailers of the cooking appliances at issue in this case. This limited sales information, in isolation, is therefore of little relevance to the questions before the Court in this matter. Moreover, neither party has identified another merger case where discussion of real-time sales information was permitted. As previously indicated by the Court from the bench, the only fair way to consider 2015 Black Friday sales information would be to postpone trial and permit discovery on the sales information, including analysis by the parties' experts. The Government has expressed its willingness to accommodate such a postponement; Defendants have rejected the proposal. The Court is prepared to accommodate a postponement of the trial if Defendants request it. Absent such a request, for the reasons noted above and substantially for the arguments set forth by the Government in its response, Defendants shall not present real-time sales information from Home Depot either through demonstrative exhibits or through the testimony of witnesses. Signed by Judge Emmet G. Sullivan on November 13, 2015. (lcegs4) (Entered: 11/13/2015)
