RESPONDENTS' MOTION TO REOPEN THE RECORD TO ADMIT ADDITIONAL EXHIBITS AND FOR EXPEDITED BRIEFING

Pursuant to 16 C.F.R. §§ 3.43(b), 3.43(f), 3.51(e)(1) and 3.54(a), Respondents Illumina, Inc. (“Illumina”) and GRAIL, LLC (“GRAIL”), respectfully request that the Commission reopen the proceeding to admit RX4069 (FTC FOIA Production Letter), RX4070 (FTC FOIA Production) and RX4071 (Chamber of Commerce FOIA Summary, together with RX4069 and RX4070 the “Additional Exhibits”) into evidence and expedite briefing on this motion to provide sufficient time for the Commission to consider this motion prior to the final decision.

On February 23, 2023, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce (the “Chamber”) published 332 heavily redacted documents that had been produced to the Chamber by the FTC in response to protracted litigation initiated by the Chamber. The produced correspondence demonstrates voluminous communications between the FTC—both staff and certain Commissioners—and European and U.K. antitrust authorities in connection with the FTC’s review and challenge of the Illumina/GRAIL transaction (the “Transaction”). While heavily redacted, the documents demonstrate extraordinary coordination between the FTC (staff and certain Commissioners) and foreign antitrust authorities beginning in October 2020 and continuing until well after the conclusion of the administrative trial in this matter, to February 2022. Of particular note are multiple emails from the UK antitrust authority to then-Acting Chair and current-Commissioner Rebecca Slaughter and then-Commissioner Rohit Chopra—and seemingly excluding the two other Commissioners—including reference to a March 30, 2021 meeting. (RX4070 at -028.) And even though Respondents requested these documents in this proceeding, the FTC improperly withheld virtually all of them from production based on spurious privilege grounds.

In February 2022, the Chamber submitted a Freedom of Information Act (“FOIA”) request for communications between the FTC and any foreign jurisdictions concerning the Transaction. The FTC delayed production to the Chamber and initially produced only transcripts from the administrative trial in this matter. In July 2022, the Chamber sued the FTC for failing to properly respond to the FOIA request. As a result of that litigation, the FTC ultimately produced 332 heavily redacted emails, totaling 679 pages, on January 23, 2023 (RX4069, RX4070). The full set of these redacted documents was published online by the Chamber on March 3, 2023, while the Chamber made available on February 23, 2023 a summary of its FOIA efforts and the produced communications (RX4071).

These communications are highly relevant to Respondents’ arguments before the Commission and, as explained below, the record should be reopened for the purpose of their admission. In particular, the communications further support Respondents’ due process claims, demonstrating the extraordinary efforts by the FTC to attempt to prevent this life-saving

Transaction while attempting to avoid federal judicial scrutiny of the FTC’s flawed challenge.¹ As Respondents have argued, “[a] fair trial in a fair tribunal is a basic requirement of due process.” Resps.’ Post-Trial Br. at 236 (quoting Kaley v. United States, 571 U.S. 320, 345 (2014)). These documents show that more than 30 FTC staff attorneys, and two of the then four Commissioners, exchanged (among them) hundreds of emails with foreign competition authorities. Underscoring the extraordinary volume of back-and-forth between the agencies, in an email to officials at the European Commission requesting a “couple of minutes [redacted] to speak about Illumina”, a staff attorney at the FTC commented that “you must be SO sick of me by now”. (RX4070 at -052.)

These heavily redacted materials show that, not only are the FTC staff and certain Commissioners biased because they voted to bring the Complaint while serving as supposedly-neutral decision-makers on this appeal, but also because the FTC, through staff and at least some Commissioners, were—potentially improperly—coordinating with foreign antitrust authorities. The timing of these communications—including, for example, just before the FTC was required to decide whether to initiate litigation against Respondents—strongly suggests that the FTC influenced foreign processes to avoid federal judicial scrutiny of its claims and improperly gerrymander jurisdiction over the transaction in Europe. It goes without saying that no U.S. district court judge would be involved in communicating with foreign antitrust authorities regarding a transaction that they were adjudicating in the United States, let alone coordinating with that foreign authorities’ challenge of the transaction. And, if they were, the judge would indisputably need to recuse themselves from that case.² The FTC should be similarly constrained. The FTC's lack of restraint in this regard further supports the substantive due process arguments asserted by Respondents.

The FTC's secretive treatment of these documents also raises procedural due process concerns. The FTC appears to have used spurious claims of confidentiality and privilege to protect the agency from embarrassment regarding its decision to use foreign antitrust processes to shield its case from federal judicial scrutiny in the United States. First, when Respondents sought production of FTC communications with foreign regulators in 2021, the FTC claimed to be withholding documents—at various times—based on attorney work product, common-interest privilege, and the U.S. SAFE WEB Act. Respondents took this claim of privilege at face value, and did not challenge it at the time, not knowing that these claims would later turn out to be a sham.

Later, when the Chamber submitted its FOIA request, the FTC changed its reasoning and claimed that the foreign antitrust authorities were acting as “consultants”—even though more than one third of the subsequently produced communications transpired after the administrative hearing ended, and the authorities could not possibly have been “consulting” on anything relating to the FTC's case. Most recently, the FTC changed its reasoning yet again and now claims that redactions of every substantive comment in the 679 pages of emails are “exempt from disclosure” for one or more of the following reasons: (a) the foreign sources have requested confidential treatment; (b) the records are “deliberative and pre-decisional” and protected by the ² The FTC's own standard for recusal is also arguably satisfied by Commissioner Slaughter's role here, as she took an active role in the investigation while she was purportedly acting as a neutral decisionmaker. See Am. Cyanamid Co. v. FTC, 363 F.2d 757 (6th Cir. 1966). However, given the structure of the agency, only dismissal with prejudice of this action will address Respondents' constitutional due process concerns.

“consultant corollary doctrine” and the “common-interest doctrine”; and (c) that “disclosure of [the] material could reasonably be expected to interfere with the conduct of the Commission’s law enforcement activities” or were obtained on the condition that confidentiality would be maintained.³

The Chamber is challenging these assertions of privilege through the FOIA process. And Respondents believe the Chamber has a strong basis to do so. The FTC has not articulated, either in these proceedings or in the proceedings with the Chamber, any valid basis for which a common interest would exist between U.S. and foreign agencies, who are tasked with enforcing different laws in different jurisdictions. See, e.g., Bank of Am. N.A. v. Terra Nova Ins. Co., 211 F. Supp. 2d 493, 498 (S.D.N.Y. 2002) (“Because the interests of the parties were not identical, the common interest doctrine does not apply”); Union Carbide Corp. v. Dow Chem. Co., 619 F. Supp. 1036, 1047 (D. Del. 1985) (“[t]he key consideration is that the nature of the [parties’ common] interest be identical, not similar”). The claim of common interest is especially weak with respect to the documents here because many of the communications occurred after the administrative trial ended.⁴ The FTC’s claims of confidentiality also appear to be pretextual as they have already disclosed the foreign agencies they were communicating with and the identity of individuals at those agencies is a matter of public record. In the meantime, given the relevance of these newly produced documents, the Commission should reopen the proceeding to admit the Additional Exhibits.

³ Respondents also request that the FTC produce the documents to Respondents in unredacted form. Any legitimate confidentiality concerns can be addressed through the protective order still in effect.

⁴ The assertion also appears to be improper for earlier documents as it is unclear what deliberative or pre-decisional information the FTC should have been sharing with foreign agencies before the Respondents granted a waiver in June 2021.

I. LEGAL STANDARD

“[A] party may move to ‘reopen the proceeding for the reception of further evidence’ at any time before the Commission issues its decision.” In re Polypore Int’l, Inc., 2010 WL 3053866, at *1 (F.T.C. July 28, 2010). To determine whether to reopen the proceeding under Rules 3.51(e)(1) and 3.54(a), the Commission considers “(1) whether the moving party can demonstrate due diligence (that is, whether there is a bona fide explanation for the failure to introduce the evidence at trial); (2) the extent to which the proffered evidence is probative; (3) whether the proffered evidence is cumulative; and (4) whether reopening the record would prejudice the non-moving party.” Id. at *1 (citations omitted).

II. ARGUMENT

A. The Commission Should Reopen the Record.

1. Respondents Can Demonstrate Due Diligence.

Respondents can demonstrate due diligence in admitting the Additional Exhibits now. Since the full set of redacted documents was published yesterday (only after the Chamber was forced to resort to litigation to compel production), Respondents could not have introduced these exhibits any earlier. In re Pom Wonderful LLC, 2012 WL 3108669, at *1 (F.T.C. July 25, 2012).

2. The Additional Exhibits Are Highly Probative to Respondents’ Due Process Claims.

The Additional Exhibits are highly probative of Respondents’ due process claims. The combination of investigative and adjudicative functions can constitute a due process violation, where, as here, “the probability of actual bias on the part of the judge or decision-maker is too high to be constitutionally tolerable”. Withrow v. Larkin, 421 U.S. 35, 47 (1975). (See Resps.’ Post-Trial Br. at § V.B; Resps’ Cm’n Br. at § V.A.) As Respondents have argued, the FTC's challenge to the Transaction creates an unconstitutional potential bias because the same individuals who voted out the complaint against Respondents and/or have prosecuted this case against them will adjudicate the matter. See Williams v. Pennsylvania, 579 U.S. 1, 8 (2016). (See Resps.' Post-Trial Br. at § V.B; Resps' Cm'n Br. at § V.A.)

These documents provide additional, compelling support for Respondents' due process arguments. Not only did Commissioner Slaughter vote out the very Complaint that is the subject of an appeal she is adjudicating, but there is now additional evidence that she and then-Commissioner Chopra knew FTC staff were (perhaps improperly) coordinating with foreign antitrust authorities in joint efforts to challenge the Transaction.⁵ There is also evidence suggesting that not all Commissioners who voted on the complaint had access to the same information, as it appears that only two of the four Commissioners were included in the communications with the foreign antitrust authorities.

The communications produced to the Chamber also raise the specter of unconstitutional influence and bias at the FTC. The documents include more than 30 FTC staff attorneys, detail communications with competition authorities from the European Union, the United Kingdom, Austria and France, and span more than a year. This massive, coordinated effort is unlikely to have flown under the radar without the knowledge and tacit, or even explicit, approval of at least some Commissioners. The documents evidencing this coordinated approach further support Respondents' due process arguments and therefore are probative on important issues concerning Respondents' defenses to the FTC's challenge.

3. The Additional Exhibits Present New Facts.

The Additional Exhibits are not cumulative, because they present new facts that were not available (and, with respect to many, did not exist) at the time of trial. See United States v. Magleby, 241 F.3d 1306, 1316 (10th Cir. 2001) (citations omitted). These records demonstrate wide-scale, potentially improper, coordination between FTC and foreign regulators not previously known to Respondents, some of which took place during and after the trial. Though the documents are heavily redacted, the breadth and frequency of communications between the FTC and their foreign counterparts—including certain communications after the administrative trial—reveal a large-scale coordinated effort that was not apparent from the privilege log and limited document production alone.

4. The Additional Exhibits Will Not Prejudice Complaint Counsel.

Finally, the admission of the Additional Exhibits will not unfairly prejudice Complaint Counsel. Complaint Counsel has had access to the Additional Exhibits all along and improperly withheld them from Respondents. It is Respondents, not Complaint Counsel, who have been unfairly prejudiced by Complaint Counsel's delay in producing these documents.

III. CONCLUSION

Respondents respectfully request that this motion be granted.

Re: Chamber of Commerce of the United States of America v. FTC, 1:22-cv-02070
(D.D.C.) (Count III); FTC FOIA No. 2022-00588

Dear Mr. Harris:

With this letter, the Federal Trade Commission makes a supplemental release of responsive, non-exempt records (Bates numbered FTC-00000001 through FTC-00000679) to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in response to the Chamber's Freedom of Information Act, 5 U.S.C. § 552, request for all records related to communications between the FTC and the European Commission or other foreign jurisdictions regarding the Illumina-Grail transaction. As noted in the parties' Joint Status Report dated December 7, 2022, "[t]he FTC has agreed to reprocess the records containing consultant corollary withholdings to take a second look at the withholdings made and exemptions asserted." Portions of these pages fall within the exemptions to the FOIA's disclosure requirements, as explained below.

Please note that we are withholding certain information within the responsive records under FOIA Exemption 3, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(3), because they are exempt from disclosure by another statute. Specifically, Section 21(f) of the FTC Act provides that the FTC may withhold any material obtained from a foreign source if that foreign source has requested confidential treatment. 15 U.S.C. § 57b-2(f)(2)(A). In this case, the FTC has received information from foreign agencies pursuant to international agreements that obligate the FTC to safeguard the confidentiality of that information. For example, a 1991 agreement between the United States and the European Commission provides as follows:

Each Party agrees to maintain, to the fullest extent possible, the confidentiality of any information provided to it in confidence by the other Party under this Agreement and to oppose, to the fullest extent possible, any application for disclosure of such information by a third party that is not authorized by the Party that supplied the information.

See Agreement Between the Government of the United States of America and the Commission of the European Communities Regarding the Application of their Competition Laws, Art. VIII, § 2 (Sep. 23, 1991), https://www.ftc.gov/system/files/agree_eurocomm.pdf.

Many of these records also contain staff analysis, opinions, and recommendations. Those portions are deliberative and pre-decisional and are an integral part of the agency's decision-making process. They are exempt from the FOIA's disclosure requirements by FOIA Exemption 5, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(5). Furthermore, some of the materials are protected by the consultant corollary doctrine, which extends Exemption 5 protection to communications between agencies and qualifying third parties. Likewise, some of the materials consist of litigation work product, which is protected by the common-interest doctrine (and Exemption 5) when exchanged with foreign agencies that share the FTC's interest in investigating or prosecuting claims against the very same merger. See Hunton & Williams v. DOJ, 590 F.3d 272, 277-81 (4th Cir. 2010).

We have also redacted portions of the records under FOIA Exemption 7(A), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(A), because disclosure of that material could reasonably be expected to interfere with the conduct of the Commission's law enforcement activities. Further, some records were obtained on the condition that the agency keep the source of the information confidential. These records are exempt from disclosure under FOIA Exemption 7(D), 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(7)(D). This exemption is intended to ensure that "confidential sources are not lost because of retaliation against the sources for past disclosure or because of the sources' fear of future disclosure." Brant Constr. Co. v. EPA, 778 F.2d 1258, 1262 (7th Cir. 1985).

Finally, portions of the responsive records contain personally identifiable information. This information is exempt from release under FOIA Exemption 6, 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6), because individuals' right to privacy outweighs the general public's interest in seeing personal identifying information.

Given the litigation status of this matter, please address any questions or concerns to the FTC's DOJ counsel, Assistant U.S. Attorney Douglas C. Dreier.

Sincerely,

/s/ Bradley Grossman

Hi: (b)(6)

I hope you've been well! There is another matter on which I wanted to touch base with you. – Illumina's proposed acquisition of Grail. (b)(3);21(f);b(7)(A) If that's the case, could we set up a quick call with your case handlers to discuss this matter, perhaps later this week?

Many thanks in advance, and best regards,

Krisztian

Monday will work. We can send a dial in but I'm not sure it's tollfree for you, so if you prefer to use your number please feel free to send a scheduler. If I don't hear back I'll send one by cop, DC.

Would 9 AM EDT/3 PM Brussels work for a videoconference? If so, I can confirm with the FTC team and send around a scheduler.

Many thanks.

Hello:

I'm back in the office now.

(b)(5) Many apologies for the delay.

Also, as you know, the administrative trial begins next Tuesday, August 24th at 10 AM EDT. The trial will be virtual, and according to the Commission order, the public portions will be available to view online if you're interested in watching it. I will provide a link when it's available.

Many thanks.

Jon

Many thanks for making the request.

Your proposal for a call next Monday at 6PM Brussels time/noon in DC works well for the team. As per usual practice, I can circulate a Zoom invite.

Also, attached, please see the public transcripts from the last days of the trial.

Would 9 AM EDT/3 PM Brussels work for a videoconference? If so, I can confirm with the FTC team and send around a scheduler.

Many thanks.

Jennifer:

I can make an 8:30 call, and I can provide a Zoom link. The only issue is that I'd be limited to only a half hour because our case teams are speaking at 9 AM and I'm also the host for that meeting.

If that timing is OK, I can circulate the calendar invite shortly.

Jennifer:

I can make an 8:30 call, and I can provide a Zoom link. The only issue is that I'd be limited to only a half hour because our case teams are speaking at 9 AM and I'm also the host for that meeting.

If that timing is OK, I can circulate the calendar invite shortly.

OK – although I think a half hour is plenty. [REDACTED] is super busy and [REDACTED] is supposed to be on the 9 AM staff call.

I can circulate the invite I just sent you if you'd like.

Jennifer:

I can make an 8:30 call, and I can provide a Zoom link. The only issue is that I'd be limited to only a half hour because our case teams are speaking at 9 AM and I'm also the host for that meeting.

If that timing is OK, I can circulate the calendar invite shortly.

OK – although I think a half hour is plenty, [REDACTED] is super busy and [REDACTED] is supposed to be on the 9 AM staff call.

I can circulate the invite I just sent you if you'd like.

I think 30 minutes is fine, but just in case let's use a different one. I'll dig one up and circulate it.

Jennifer:

I can make an 8:30 call, and I can provide a Zoom link. The only issue is that I'd be limited to only a half hour because our case teams are speaking at 9 AM and I'm also the host for that meeting.

If that timing is OK, I can circulate the calendar invite shortly.

U.S. Chamber of Commerce

The FTC, Europe, and Illumina-Grail: When Cooperation Crosses the Line

In the U.S. mergers are presumed lawful, and the burden is on the government to prove the transaction is likely to harm competition. Ultimately, to block a transaction, the government must do so in court. Further, mergers are intensely fact specific to the transaction, and the competitive impact in the U.S. will be different than in foreign markets. In many mergers, one or both of the parties fail to have business dealings in a foreign jurisdiction, making any review initiated by that foreign jurisdiction highly questionable. In short, merger review requires limited, if any, cooperation with foreign agencies, and mergers that span multiple jurisdictions should be conducted in parallel, not in some coordinated fashion to make an end run around U.S. courts.

It would be of grave concern if the Federal Trade Commission (FTC) was found to be improperly coordinating its merger review with foreign competition agencies in ways that deny the merging parties their due process rights in U.S. courts, in turn harming U.S. companies seeking to improve their international competitiveness. Yet such a serious concern was first raised by the U.S. Chamber in a September 2021 blog post as part of the FTC's ongoing attempt to block the Illumina-Grail transaction.¹

In February 2022, the Chamber issued a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request for communications the FTC may have had with foreign jurisdictions regarding its ongoing efforts to block Illumina's acquisition of Grail. The FTC stalled in making a timely response to the Chamber and ultimately produced transcripts of its administrative trial. Those transcripts were already public and had nothing to do with FTC communications with foreign agencies. The agency claimed that it did not need to produce anything further because the European Union (EU) was a "consultant" to the agency on the Illumina-Grail matter.

1. The Chamber has taken no position on the merits of the Illumina-Grail transaction, but it believes that every transaction requires the FTC to follow the law and that the merging parties be afforded due process.

The Chamber sued the FTC over this and other unanswered FOIA requests. As part of the litigation, the FTC recently was forced to produce its communications with foreign agencies. Unfortunately, the FTC redacted the content of those communications, and the Chamber is evaluating those confidentiality claims as part of ongoing litigation.

Despite the redactions, several revelations raise serious questions about whether the FTC crossed a line from cooperation with foreign agencies into an effort to conspire with them against U.S. companies.

Specifically, the documents show that the FTC had extensive correspondence with competition officials in France, Austria, the U.K., and the EU about the merger without any apparent legitimate reason to do so—and around the same time that those foreign jurisdictions began raising questions about this merger of two American companies.

Background

Typically, when the FTC wants to block a merger, it seeks to obtain a preliminary injunction from a federal court, rather than use its internal administrative processes, which can take a long time. The FTC initially sought a preliminary injunction in the Illumina-Grail case. After it did so, many experts publicly commented that the FTC's challenge might not hold up in court.

The FTC withdrew its complaint in court after the EU announced that it intends to review the transaction, despite the EU at the time having no clear legal basis to do so.² The EU relied on a novel interpretation of its authority to justify its action despite never having previously used its newly self-identified authority in such a manner.

At that time, the transaction needed to close in December 2021. Illumina-Grail was put under tremendous pressure to abandon the transaction. Europe's pending review of the transaction was months away from concluding its investigation. The FTC, while no longer seeking a preliminary injunction, decided to move ahead with its own internal administrative trial that would last well into the following year. Illumina-Grail, facing uncertainty extending well beyond the contractually required date to close the transaction, went ahead and legally closed the deal, forcing the FTC to seek to unwind the transaction.

The transaction, to this day, continues to face uncertainty. The FTC recently lost its own internal trial, and the FTC commissioners will soon vote to decide whether to overturn the advice that their own chief administrative law judge has given them, which is to stop challenging the deal. If the commissioners still move to unwind the transaction, the case is headed back to court. In Europe, there are multiple questions being litigated as the EU ultimately moved to block the transaction.

2. In July 2021, the Chamber wrote a letter to the Europe competition authority expressing deep concerns about its novel and completely unexpected interpretation of Article 22. This interpretation allows the EU to exercise extraterritorial review of mergers that fail to have a legitimate nexus to the European market.

Key Questions

Why all the coordination?

Any decision to block a transaction must be made independently based on the facts and the governing law specific to each jurisdiction. Instead, the FTC, by its own admission, viewed the EU as a consultant on the transaction. Recent FOIA disclosures show that the agency had extensive conversations with foreign jurisdictions at key moments in the investigative timeline leading up to the decision by the FTC and the EU to block the transaction.

Why the silence?

It has long been an accepted international best practice that only those mergers that have a material impact within a jurisdiction should be reviewed by that jurisdiction. In the Illumina-Grail transaction, Grail has no business operations and generated no revenues from within the EU. Yet the European Commission (EC) decided to upend international norms by manufacturing a reason (with help from France) to review the Illumina-Grail transaction.

Historically, had a foreign jurisdiction done this to two American firms, the U.S. government would have aggressively pushed back on procedural grounds even if the FTC was challenging the transaction on the merits here at home.

Why didn't the FTC move ahead in court?

Normally, when the FTC goes to court to block a merger it seeks a preliminary injunction. When Illumina-Grail announced it would close, the FTC could have returned to court. Instead, Illumina-Grail has had to endure a cumbersome internal administrative trial, and the FTC suffered an embarrassing defeat before its own chief administrative law judge. Now, the transaction appears headed back to court later this year. Rather than waste precious agency resources, the FTC should have stayed the course and followed its normal protocols and sought an injunction.

FOIA Litigation Uncovers—

Topline findings

- The FTC recently produced 332 files, some containing multiple emails as part of a thread. The emails often reference calls or facilitate the sharing of attachments.
- The FTC had communications with foreign agencies dating back to October 2020.
- The FTC proactively sought help from foreign jurisdictions. Not a single one of these exchanges appears to have been initiated by the foreign agency.
- The FTC sought to discuss the case with four foreign authorities, first the U.K., followed by Austria, the EU and France.
- Email communication from April 2021 forward is almost exclusively with the EU, save two productions from November 2021 and December 2022 with the U.K. and two productions from October 2021 that included both the EU and the U.K.

Extensive Communications

- 266 separate productions, containing multiple emails with the European authority
- 34 separate productions, containing multiple emails with the U.K. authority
- 16 separate productions, containing multiple emails with the Austrian authority
- 14 separate productions, containing multiple emails with the French authority
- 2 separate productions, containing multiple emails with the U.K. and EU on the same thread
- While most of the communications are led by FTC staffers Sarah Wohl, Maria Coppola, and John Nathan, there are in total some dozens of FTC staff on these emails, including a small number of emails with, at the time, Acting Chair Slaughter and Commissioner Chopra.
