1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 The Best Buy Plaintiffs’ request for $9,103,109.95 in attorney’s fees and another 3 $8,550,525.26 in additional costs, for a total of $17,653,635.21, is completely unreasonable in 4 light of the outcome of the trial. The Best Buy Plaintiffs are not entitled to fees in the first place 5 and, even if they were, asking for well over twice the damages proven is unfounded.

6 Recoverability of Fees: This trial was not about whether Defendant HannStar Display 7 Corporation (“HannStar”) participated in a conspiracy to fix the price of TFT-LCD panels.
8 HannStar long ago acknowledged taking part in a TFT-LCD panels conspiracy. Instead, the trial
9 was about whether the Best Buy Plaintiffs could recover the more than $800 million in damages 10 they sought even though they did not purchase TFT-LCD panels from the conspirators, the 11 conspiracy took place outside the United States, and an extremely dubious damages theory 12 notwithstanding. After a costly six-week trial, the jury found that the Best Buy Plaintiffs had 13 suffered only $7.47 million in damages for its direct purchases and zero in damages for its 14 indirect purchases. The jury also found that the TFT-LCD panels conspiracy did not involve 15 conduct which had a “direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on trade or commerce 16 in the United States.” That finding means that the Sherman Act does not apply to the Best Buy 17 Plaintiffs’ claims in the first place and compels the Court to vacate its Judgment against 18 HannStar. By necessity, it also compels the Court to deny the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Motion for 19 Fees and Costs.

20 The TFT-LCD panels conspiracy took place outside the United States. There was no 21 evidence to the contrary. The Best Buy Plaintiffs tried to invoke the Sherman Act by having the 22 jury find that the conspiracy had a “direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on trade 23 or commerce in the United States.” But the jury’s definitive “No” answer to Question 5 means 24 there is no basis upon which to apply any of the three exceptions to the FTAIA (domestic injury, 25 import commerce or export commerce) and, thus, no means by which the extraterritorial TFT-26 LCD panels conspiracy might fall within the Sherman Act. The affirmative answers to 27 Questions 3 and 4 do not change the outcome. Those questions did not ask whether the only 28 conspiracy the jury found—“a conspiracy to fix, raise, maintain or stabilize the prices of TFT-

1 LCD panels,” (Question 2)—involved “straightforward import commerce” that would be subject 2 to the Sherman Act without an FTAIA exception. They permitted affirmative answers based on 3 the importation of “finished goods,” which by their nature do not involve “straightforward 4 import commerce” in TFT-LCD panels. Given the absence of any evidence of “straightforward 5 import commerce” in panels, and the jury’s finding that the panels conspiracy did not have a 6 “direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on trade or commerce in the United States,” 7 the only way to read the verdict consistently is that the panels conspiracy itself (without 8 accounting for finished goods), lacked the nexus to U.S. commerce required to invoke the 9 Sherman Act. There is thus no basis to apply the Sherman Act to the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ claims, 10 and likewise no basis to award fees or costs to the Best Buy Plaintiffs under the Clayton Act.

11 Results After Offset: The result obtained by the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ is also effectively a 12 loss given that the REDACTED settlement offset means there will be no net recovery from 13 this trial. The Best Buy Plaintiffs secured settlements REDACTED 14 REDACTED They
15 insisted on taking Toshiba and HannStar to trial and, after a six-week trial and less than one day 16 of deliberations, lost outright with respect to Toshiba and obtained a damages award against 17 HannStar of only $7,471,943—$0 in damages for their indirect purchases. The trial was 18 completely pointless, or worse, given that the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ settlements totaled over REDAC 19 times the actual damages they were found to have suffered. Under those circumstances the Best 20 Buy Plaintiffs have no right to now seek nearly $18 million in fees and costs. That is more than 21 REDACTED of the actual damages found by the jury.

22 To ignore the net result obtained by taking this case to trial, or stated differently to 23 exempt the award of attorney’s fees and costs from offset, would eliminate any incentive for 24 plaintiffs to negotiate reasonable settlements with a defendant who has pled guilty and would 25 make it costless for plaintiffs to roll the dice and proceed to trial against one last defendant, 26 regardless of the actual damages they suffered and are ultimately awarded at trial. Such a rule 27 would mire this District Court in damages trials for years to come. This can be prevented by 28 subjecting plaintiffs’ requests for fees and costs to the settlement offset, as permitted under Ninth

1 Circuit law.

2 Admitted Non-Recoverable Fees: The Court should reject the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ 3 request for fees incurred pursuing their unsuccessful claims against Toshiba (by $2.97 million)
4 and for work negotiating settlements with other Defendants (by almost $142,000). Plaintiffs 5 concede these fees are unrecoverable but failed to properly remove them from their fee motion.

6 Unsuccessful Claims: The Court should likewise reject Plaintiffs’ request for fees 7 incurred pursuing their unsuccessful indirect purchases claims (by $1 million).

8 Unreasonable Billings: The Best Buy Plaintiffs’ $17.6 million request is patently 9 unreasonable when measured against the zero net recovery against HannStar. It is also no 10 exaggeration to say that HannStar was an afterthought in this case and at this trial, and the Best 11 Buy Plaintiffs’ request should be reduced to account for the vast majority of time and work spent 12 pursuing wholly unsuccessful claims against Toshiba. Their request also suffers pervasively 13 from problems such as double-dipping, inaccuracies, commingled time, and lack of 14 documentation.

15 Unrecoverable Costs: The Best Buy Plaintiffs’ request for more than $9.1 million in 16 “costs” should be denied because, under controlling Ninth Circuit law, a successful antitrust 17 plaintiff cannot recover its costs unless they are taxable or expressly authorized by some other 18 statute. Virtually all of the costs requested are non-taxable and are not otherwise authorized.

19 Before acting on this Motion, this Court must first find that there is a basis, grounded in 20 substantial evidence, to even apply the Sherman Act to the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ claims. In light 21 of the jury’s Special Verdict findings, there is none, and both the Judgment should be vacated 22 and this Motion should be denied. Finally, even if this Court were to entertain this Motion, the 23 Best Buy Plaintiffs have failed to meet their burden of demonstrating the reasonableness and 24 necessity of all of the fees and costs requested and this Motion should be denied on those 25 additional grounds.

26 II. ARGUMENT

27 A. Legal Standard for Recovery of Fees under the Clayton Act.

28 Section 4 of the Clayton Act permits a plaintiff “injured in his business or property by 1 reason of anything forbidden in the antitrust laws” to recover “the cost of suit, including . . .

2 reasonable attorney’s fees.” 15 U.S.C. § 15.¹ To recover fees, a successful antitrust plaintiff 3 bears the burden of proving: (1) an antitrust injury that gives rise to their entitlement to the 4 requested fees; and (2) that the requested fees were both reasonable and necessary to the pursuit
5 of the successful antitrust claim. See Hensley v. Eckerhart, 461 U.S. 424, 434 (1983) (opining 6 that fee applicant bears the burden of establishing the fees are reasonable and necessary); Azizian 7 v. Federated Dep’t. Stores, Inc., 499 F.3d 950, 959-60 (9th Cir. 2007) (requiring proof of 8 antitrust injury to recover fees under Section 4 of Clayton Act); Flitton v. Primary Residential 9 Mort., Inc., 614 F.3d 1173, 1178 (10th Cir. 2010) (fee applicants must “prove and . . . establish 10 the reasonableness of each dollar, each hour, above zero”).

11 Writing specifically about attorney’s fees under the Clayton Act, the Ninth Circuit found 12 that “attorney’s fee[s] under [§ 4 are] incidental to the statutory right to damages . . . This 13 incidence or relationship to antitrust damages recovered also solves the problem of determining 14 who is the prevailing party in an antitrust treble damages suit.” Twin City Sportservice, Inc. v.
15 Charles O. Finley & Co., 676 F.2d 1291, 1313-14 (9th Cir. 1982) (emphasis added); see also 16 Twentieth Century Fox Film Corp. v. Goldwyn, 328 F.2d 190, 221 (9th Cir. 1964) (reasoning that 17 attorney’s fees “are usually fixed at a level substantially below the amount of actual damages 18 awarded”) (emphasis added). Attorney’s fees are therefore an adjunct to an award of damages; 19 the plaintiff must recover something more than $0 to be entitled to attorney’s fees in the first 20 instance. See Twin City Sportservice, 676 F.2d at 1314.

21 Finally, this Court has discretion to reduce fees where the amount sought is unreasonable 22 or where the work expended was unnecessary to the plaintiff’s success. See Twin City

23
24 ¹ The Best Buy Plaintiffs also bring this Motion seeking to recover fees under Minnesota law.
25 However, the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ sole claims under Minnesota law were for indirect purchases.
26 Those claims were unsuccessful given the jury’s award of zero damages, and fees are therefore 27 unavailable under Minnesota law. (Special Verdict at Q.10 at 5 (Docket No. 8562 in M 07-28 01827 SI); see also Jury Instructions as read to the Jury appended to the concurrently filed Declaration of Joanna Rosen (“Rosen Decl.” at Ex. 4, 3386-3389.) Ultimately, it makes no difference as even Plaintiffs concede that “Minnesota antitrust law is to be interpreted consistently with the federal courts’ construction of federal antitrust law.” (Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Mot. at 7:27-8:3 (“Mot.”) (Docket No. 8610 in M 07-1827 SI) (citation omitted).)

1 Sportservice, Inc., 676 F.2d at 1312 (“The amount of attorney’s fees allowed in connection with 2 an award of damages in an antitrust suit is within the discretion of the trial court.”).

3 B. The Jury’s Findings Provide No Basis to Apply the Sherman Act, and the 4 Best Buy Plaintiffs Therefore Cannot Recover Their Costs of Suit Under the 5 Clayton Act.

6 The jury found only that HannStar knowingly participated in a conspiracy to fix the price
7 of “TFT-LCD panels.” (Special Verdict at Q.2 at 5 (“Speical Verdict”) (Docket No. 8562 in M 8 07-01827 SI)). It then found that the panels conspiracy did not have a “direct, substantial, and 9 reasonably foreseeable effect on trade or commerce in the United States”—something that is 10 required in each of the three exceptions to the FTAIA. Under controlling Ninth Circuit law, the 11 jury’s findings under the Alcoa/Hartford Fire “effects test” are insufficient to invoke an 12 exception to the FTAIA and Plaintiffs, thus, cannot recover under the Sherman Act.² United 13 States v. LSL Biotechnologies, 379 F.3d 672, 678-79 (9th Cir. 2004) (“The government contends
14 that the FTAIA merely codified the existing common law regarding when the Sherman Act 15 applies to foreign conduct and that we should continue to employ the Alcoa effects test. We 16 reject this contention.”). The affirmative answers to Questions 3 and 4 do not allow the Court to 17 draw the conclusion that the TFT-LCD panels conspiracy involved import commerce, because 18 (a) the affirmative answers did not require that conclusion given the “and/or finished products” 19 language in questions, and (b) there was absolutely no evidence that price-fixed panels were 20 imported into the U.S. This defeats even the meager recovery the Best Buy Plaintiffs obtained, 21 and means they are not entitled to fees and costs.

22 1. The Jury’s “No” Answer to Question 5 Means That None of the 23 FTAIA Exceptions Could Apply to The Conspiracy.

24 For the Sherman Act to apply to a foreign conspiracy, the conspiracy at issue must either 25 involve goods that are directly imported into the U.S. or there must be a basis for invoking an 26 FTAIA “exception.” See F. Hoffman-LaRoche Ltd. v. Empagran S.A., 542 U.S. 155, 161

27 _____
28 ² See Hartford Fire Ins. Co. v. Cal., 509 U.S. 764 (1993); See United States v. Aluminum Co. of America, 148 F.2d 416 (2d Cir. 1945)

1 (2004). That is, the FTAIA operates from a kind of taxonomy that foreign anticompetitive
2 activity can be divided into import commerce and non-import commerce. Import commerce 3 does not present an FTAIA issue; it is within the Sherman Act simply because imports are 4 deemed to be U.S. commerce no less than domestic transactions.³ But all foreign commerce that 5 is not “import commerce” does present an FTAIA issue, and the statute operates to place it 6 initially outside the reach of the Sherman Act. Id. This foreign, non-import commerce remains 7 outside the Sherman Act unless one of three very specific exceptions to the FTAIA can be 8 invoked. All three of these exceptions require some kind of “direct, substantial, and reasonably 9 foreseeable” effect on trade or commerce in the United States. 15 U.S.C. § 6a(1)(A), (B). The 10 “domestic injury” exception requires a “direct, substantial, and reasonably foreseeable effect” on 11 “trade or commerce which is not trade or commerce with foreign nations” (i.e., domestic 12 commerce), id. at § 6a(1)(A); the “import commerce” exception requires a “direct, substantial, 13 and reasonably foreseeable effect” on “import trade or import commerce with foreign nations” 14 (i.e., import commerce), id.; and the “export commerce” exception requires a “direct, substantial, 15 and reasonably foreseeable effect” on the “export trade or export commerce with foreign 16 nations” of someone exporting from the United States (i.e., export commerce”), id. at § 6a(1)(B).

17 The jury was asked to find whether the TFT-LCD panels conspiracy had the required 18 effect for an FTAIA exception in Question 5 of the Special Verdict, and it answered “No.” This 19 means as a matter of law that there is no basis to invoke any of the three exceptions to the 20 FTAIA and no FTAIA basis for bringing HannStar’s conduct or the alleged TFT-LCD panel 21 conspiracy within the scope of the Sherman Act.

22 2. The Jury’s Findings under Questions 3 and 4 Do Not Serve As A Basis
23 to Apply the Sherman Act.
24

25 ³ As explained by the Seventh Circuit, “straightforward import commerce” is “excluded at the 26 outset from the coverage of the FTAIA in the same way that domestic interstate commerce is 27 excluded” and “is subject to the Sherman Act’s general requirements for effects on commerce, 28 not to the special requirements spelled out in the FTAIA.” Minn-Chem, Inc. v. Agrium, Inc., 683 F.3d 843, 854, 857 (7th Cir. 2012) (en banc). “If [a] foreign company is engaged in direct import sales, it must naturally comply with U.S. law just as all of its domestic competitors do.
Id. at 857.

1 The jury’s “Yes” answers to Questions 3 and 4 of the Special Verdict do not allow the 2 Court to draw the conclusion that the TFT-LCD conspiracy involved “import commerce,” which 3 is the only available option for finding that the conspiracy is subject to the Sherman Act.

4 In the first place there is no evidence that price-fixed TFT-LCD panels were imported 5 into the U.S. That means the conspirators themselves were either engaged in importing panels or 6 selling panels directly to someone who brought them into the U.S., presumably to manufacture 7 something in the U.S. The evidence was that the panels were sold to OEMs who invariably 8 converted them into finished goods outside the United States, and then imported the finished 9 goods into the U.S. This was true even with respect to U.S. OEMs such as Dell, who 10 manufacture their finished goods in Europe or Asia. They import their own finished goods, not 11 TFT-LCD panels.

12 It was undoubtedly for this reason that the Best Buy Plaintiffs pressed the Court to ask 13 Questions 3 and 4—which appear aimed at asking whether the conspiracy involved import 14 commerce—as a disjunctive question about whether “the conspiracy involved TFT-LCD panels 15 and/or finished products. . . imported into the United States.”⁴ This was the only way they could 16 get the jury’s “Yes” answers to Questions 3 and 4, given the facts of the case.⁵ This is confirmed 17 by the jury’s “No” answer to Question 5, which asked whether the TFT-LCD panels “conspiracy 18 involved conduct which had a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on trade or 19 commerce in the United States.” That is a lesser, more relaxed standard than whether the 20 conspiracy involved “straightforward import commerce.” Minn-Chem, 683 F.3d at 857.
21 Straightforward import commerce will necessarily have a direct, substantial and reasonably 22 foreseeable effect on trade or commerce in the United States,” which is why it is not even 23 necessary to think about that in FTAIA terms. Accordingly, if the TFT-LCD panels conspiracy 24

25 ⁴ (See Rosen Decl. Ex. 4 at Tr. Pages 3357:3-18, 3359:8-14, 3364:13-15.)

26 ⁵ Question 3 asks whether “the conspiracy involved TFT-LCD panels and/or finished products 27 (e.g., notebook computers, computer monitors, televisions, camcorders, cell phones and digital 28 cameras containing TFT-LCD panels) imported in the United States.” Adding “and/or finished products” to that question guaranteed an affirmative answer, since no one doubts that “notebook computers, computer monitors, televisions, camcorders, cell phones and digital cameras containing TFT-LCD panels” are imported into the U.S.

1 did not have “a direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect on trade or commerce in the 2 United States, as the jury found, it is impossible to find that the panels conspiracy involved 3 imported goods. The Sherman Act thus does not apply.

4 The matter is no doubt confused by the divergent answers to Questions 4 and 5, both of 5 which ask if there is a “substantial” effect in the United States. But that reflects two problems 6 with Question 4 and cannot save plaintiffs’ case. These Questions diverge on the issue of 7 intent—Question 4 requires an “intended” effect in the United States for a “Yes” answer, while 8 Question 5 does not require an intended effect, and asks only whether there is a “reasonably 9 foreseeable” effect in the United States. But import commerce of the type sufficient to invoke 10 the Sherman Act without an FTAIA exception is not subject to U.S. law because of intent; 11 import commerce constitutes direct participation in the U.S. economy that is always sufficient to 12 invoke the Sherman Act. Id. There is no basis in the record for the jury to have found that that 13 the only conspiracy found—on panels—operated on import commerce. Intent is thus immaterial 14 for these purposes.⁶

15 In all events, the affirmative answers to Questions 3 and 4 are almost certainly the 16 product of the option given to the jury to find that “finished products” were imported into the 17 United States. That is indisputable—but says nothing and allows no conclusions to be drawn 18 about whether the conspiracy’s TFT-LCD panels were imported into the United States as 19 “straightforward import commerce.” The short of it is that Questions 2 and 5 both use the 20 proper, limited term “TFT-LCD panels conspiracy,” and the jury found that the conspiracy 21 existed but did not have a “direct, substantial and reasonably foreseeable effect” on U.S.
22 commerce to invoke the Sherman Act. The answers to Questions 3 and 4 need not mean, and on 23 the record evidence cannot mean, that the conspiracy operated on import commerce. The jury’s 24 findings thus preclude any potential basis for the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ claim under the Sherman 25 Act, and they are not entitled to any fees or costs, accordingly.

26
27 ⁶ We do not doubt that intent can bear on whether conduct had the effects required for an FTAIA 28 exception. Hartford Fire Ins., 509 U.S. 764 at 796. But that does not mean that intent can turn non-import commerce into import commerce so as to avoid the need for an FTAIA exception.

1 $39 million they contend HannStar owes in treble damages ($7.47 million x 3) plus fees and 2 costs (in excess of $17 million). The Best Buy Plaintiffs have objected and refused to disclose
3 the financial terms of their engagement of Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi (“RKMC”).⁹
4 However, given the enormity of the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ total settlements and the relatively small 5 size of damages that the Best Buy Plaintiffs actually suffered, one can only assume that both the 6 Best Buy Plaintiffs and RKMC have already both been made whole. There is no reason not to 7 apply offset to attorney’s fees awards in such a situation.

8 Indeed, to do otherwise contradicts the established principle that “a payment by a joint 9 tort-feasor diminishes the claim against the remaining tort-feasor[s].” See Seymour, 809 F.2d at 10 1389. Doing so would also allow double recovery: the Best Buy Plaintiffs will not have to dip 11 into its recovery to pay its attorney’s fees if this Court applies the setoff, but the Best Buy 12 Plaintiffs will be doubly enriched if the Court does not. Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corp. v.
13 Brookside Theatre Corp., 194 F.2d 846, 859 (8th Cir. 1952) (opining with regard to attorney’s 14 fees that a plaintiff “should not be made more profitable” because it was the “victim of a 15 conspiracy in restraint of trade.”).

16 Faced with the offset of their damages award and attorney’s fees, the Best Buy Plaintiffs 17 rely solely on cases from outside of this Circuit, Funeral Consumers Alliance, Inc. v. Serv.
18 Corp., Int’l, 695 F.3d 330, 336-342 (5th Cir. 2012) and Sciambra v. Graham News, 892 F.2d 19 411, 415 (5th Cir. 1990) from the Fifth Circuit, and Gulfstream III Assocs., Inc. v. Gulfstream

20 ⁹ On October 15, 2013, HannStar filed a request to substitute counsel (Stipulation and Order to 21 Amend Briefing and Hearing Schedule at 2:1-5 (Docket No. 8680 in M 07-1827 SI 22 (“Stipulation”)), and asked the Best Buy Plaintiffs to agree to a brief extension of time to file this 23 Opposition. Best Buy Plaintiffs’ agreed to the requested extension only on the condition that 24 HannStar agree to drop its attempts to seek further discovery, including production of any of the 25 Best Buy Plaintiffs’ settlement agreements and their fee agreement with counsel. Id. at 2:12-18 26 (indicating that HannStar will “forebear from making any further requests for information 27 (discovery) to or asserting any entitlement to further information (discovery) from . . . Best Buy 28 Plaintiffs other than in HannStar’s (a) opposition to . . . Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Motion for Attorneys’ Fees and Costs and (b) opposition to . . . Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Bill of Costs.”) In the interim, Special Master Quinn indicated that he was inclined to require production of the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ engagement agreement with Robins Kaplan. However, pursuant to the parties’ agreement, Special Master Quinn did not issue a formal ruling and the Best Buy Plaintiffs have not produced this agreement. Should the Court deem the actual amount of attorney’s fees paid by the Best Buy Plaintiffs to be relevant, HannStar respectfully requests that the Best Buy Plaintiffs be required to produce its engagement agreement with counsel.

1 Aerospace Corp., 995 F.2d 414, 419 (3d Cir. 1993) from the Third Circuit, to argue that a 2 settlement offset does not apply to an award of attorney’s fees. These findings are premised on 3 the supposition that “an award of attorneys’ fees is not dependent upon” an “award of 4 compensatory damages.” Gulfstream III Assocs., 995 F.2d at 419; see also Sciambra, 892 F.2d 5 at 415. From there, the courts concluded that the attorney’s fee award was safe from offset 6 because a plaintiff in those jurisdictions need only establish liability to be eligible for attorney’s 7 fees. However, that is not the law in the Ninth Circuit.

8 The Ninth Circuit has long recognized that the purpose of the attorney’s fee provision in 9 Section 4 of the Clayton Act “is to award the successful plaintiff a reasonable attorney’s fee so 10 that his treble damage recovery would not be unduly diminished by the payment to his attorneys 11 and further encourage antitrust law enforcement.” Twin City Sportservice, 676 F.2d at 1314 12 (citing Perkins v. Standard Oil Co., 474 F.2d 549 (9th Cir. 1973)). That goal is not served by 13 granting an award of fees to a plaintiff who vastly overreaches in a long and costly trial and 14 ultimately recovers zero in damages. The notion that “an antitrust plaintiff can proceed to trial 15 for a determination of liability and a potential fee award even where previous settlements already 16 have clearly negated any actual receipt of further damages,” Funeral Consumers, 892 F.2d at 17 339, n.4, undermines that goal and incentivizes trial on the question of liability even if the 18 prospects of damages are dim or the plaintiff’s odds of recouping a settlement in excess of the 19 setoff amount is unlikely. On this point, the Funeral Consumers dissent warned that because 20 “the named plaintiffs have received well over their claimed treble damages through the . . .
21 [s]ettlement[s],” the plaintiff had been compensated for its harm and “any trial to award 22 attorneys’ fees and costs would only exponentially increase the attorneys’ fees in question – with 23 no more awarded to the plaintiff . . . This case, as it relates to the plaintiffs, is moot because their 24 injury has been remedied.” Id. at 352-53.

25 To exempt an award of attorney’s fees and costs from setoff would eliminate any 26 incentive for plaintiffs to negotiate reasonable settlements with a defendant who has pled guilty 27 (and, thus, is not contesting liability and is guaranteed a judgment against it) and would make it 28 costless for plaintiffs to proceed to trial, regardless of the actual damages they have suffered and

1 are ultimately awarded. Such a rule would clog this Court with nothing but damages trials for 2 years to come.

3 D. The Best Buy Plaintiffs Failed to Remove Fees and Costs They Concede Are 4 Unrecoverable.

5 The Best Buy Plaintiffs concede, as they must, that they cannot recover for prosecuting 6 their unsuccessful claims against Toshiba and for negotiating settlements with other Defendants.
7 (Best Buy Plaintiffs' Mot. ("Motion") at 5:13-20 (Docket No. 8610 in M 07-1827 SI).)
8 However, they failed to completely remove these entries from their requests, as they claimed 9 they did:

10 (1) Unsuccessful Claims Against Toshiba. The Best Buy Plaintiffs concede they 11 are not entitled to fees incurred in connection with their unsuccessful claims against Toshiba, and 12 claim to have removed all such fees from their Motion. See id. However, HannStar's expert, 13 Mr. Gary Greenfield, performed a careful review of the Best Buy Plaintiffs' Motion papers and 14 supporting documentation and found that the Best Buy Plaintiffs failed to remove nearly 15 $124,000 in fees that specifically relate to work performed solely in connection with Toshiba, as 16 well as nearly $263,000 in fees incurred in, for example, deposing Toshiba-related witnesses.
17 (Declaration of Gary Greenfield ("Greenfield Decl."), filed concurrently, ¶¶ 33, 50, Exs. 16, 18 17.)¹⁰

19 In addition, the Best Buy Plaintiffs seek more than $10,157 in costs directly and solely 20 related to their now-unsuccessful attempts to fasten liability on Toshiba. (Rosen Decl. ¶ 22.)
21 For example, the Best Buy Plaintiffs include deposition and interpretation costs associated with 22 seven Toshiba-related witnesses, amounting to nearly $7,700 in costs. (Id. ¶ 22(a).) These 23 deponents are witnesses who did not testify about HannStar, who were not found by the jury to 24 have participated in any conspiracy, and for whose costs HannStar should not be responsible.
25 (See generally Best Buy's Objections to Toshiba's Application to Tax Costs at 2:14 to 5:13 26

27 ¹⁰ In addition to the foregoing, Mr. Greenfield's analysis demonstrates that the Best Buy 28 Plaintiffs failed to deduct sufficient time or fees for their failed litigation against Toshiba. (See Greenfield Decl. ¶¶ 48-51, 56-61, Exs. 15, 16, 27, 30.)

1 (Docket No. 8671 in M 07-1827 SI.) The Best Buy Plaintiffs also seek recovery of more than 2 $2,000 in mediator costs for a mediation session with Toshiba, which HannStar did not attend.
3 (Rosen Decl. ¶22(c).)

4 (2) Settlement Proceedings With Other Defendants. The Court should not 5 reimburse work “devoted to the case against other defendants who settle or who are found not to 6 be liable.” Baughman v. Wilson Freight Forwarding Co., 583 F.2d 1208, 1214 (3d Cir. 1978).
7 The Best Buy Plaintiffs tacitly accept this principle, and indicated in their Motion that they 8 removed the fees incurred negotiating settlements with eight settling Defendants. (Mot. at 5:13-9 15, 7:21-26.) Nonetheless, their request still includes more than $142,000 in fees, (Greenfield 10 Decl. ¶¶ 37, 50, Ex. 16), incurred in connection with various mediations and settlement 11 negotiations with these Defendants. These amounts should also be deducted.

12 E. The Best Buy Plaintiffs Cannot Recover For Work Prosecuting Their 13 Unsuccessful Indirect Purchaser Claims.

14 Just as the Best Buy Plaintiffs concede they cannot recover for work incurred in the 15 prosecution of their unsuccessful claims against Toshiba, they are also unable to recover for 16 work related to their unsuccessful indirect purchaser claims. See Baughman, 583 F.2d at 1214.
17 The jury found the Best Buy Plaintiffs suffered zero in damages for its indirect purchases.
18 (Special Verdict at Q.10 at 5.) This means the Best Buy Plaintiffs should not recover any of the 19 $1 million (estimated conservatively) in attorney’s fees incurred pursuing and analyzing their 20 indirect purchases or the $1.75 million in expert witness fees for their indirect purchases 21 damages expert, Alan Frankel.¹¹ (Greenfield Decl. Exs. 28, 29; Rosen Decl. ¶ 10.)

22 F. The Best Buy Plaintiffs Have Not Met Their Burden of Proving that 23 the Requested Fees and Costs Were “Reasonable” and “Necessary.”

24 Even if the Best Buy Plaintiffs are entitled to an award of fees and costs, they have not 25 proved that their more than $17.6 million request is both “reasonable” and “necessary,” and their 26 request should be reduced accordingly.

27 _____
28 ¹¹ In addition, as explained Section II.G.(1), Best Buy Plaintiffs are not entitled to any professional fees charged/incurred by Dr. Frankel.

1 1. The Best Buy Plaintiffs’ $17.6 Million Request Is Unreasonable
2 in Light of its Zero Recovery From HannStar and Should Be 3 Reduced.

4 As the Supreme Court has explained: “The product of reasonable hours times a 5 reasonable rate does not end the inquiry.” See Hensley, 461 U.S. at 434. District Courts must 6 also ask, “did the plaintiff achieve a level of success that makes the hours reasonably expended a 7 satisfactory basis for making a fee award?” Id. Where the plaintiff’s recovery is nominal, 8 technical or de minimis, the court may dispense with the lodestar calculation and establish a low 9 fee or no fee at all. See Farrar v. Hobby, 506 U.S. 103, 116-18 (1992).¹² To that end, courts 10 must consider the amount involved in the litigation and the results the plaintiff achieves. See 11 Kerr v. Screen Extras Guild, Inc., 526 F.2d 67 (9th Cir. 1975) (considering the “amount involved 12 and the results obtained” in deciding an attorney’s fees award); Wild Equity Inst. v. City and 13 Cnty. of San Francisco, (N.D. Cal. July 1, 2010) (Docket. No. 189 in C 11-00958 SI) at 7:18-8:5 14 (“Wild Equity Institute”) (“significantly decreasing” the fee award by three-quarters from 15 $1,306,400 to $326,000 because plaintiff gained its desired result but did not achieve anything 16 that was not already required by the law).

17 As the Ninth Circuit observed years ago, attorney’s fee awards “are usually fixed at a 18 level substantially below the amount of actual damages awarded.” Goldwyn, 328 F.2d at 221 19 (awarding $100,000 in fees in connection with a $300,000 trebled damages award in antitrust 20 suit). The factors that the Goldwyn court observed could lead to a fee that exceeds or equals the 21 damage award—namely, a vigorously contested suit—do not apply here given HannStar’s 22 concessions at trial. Indeed, the authorities cited by the Best Buy Plaintiffs demonstrate that the 23 amount of actual damages is a proper limiting influence on the fee award and support the 24 reduction of the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ request. In the majority of these cases, the fees awarded

26 ¹² Although the specific holdings of Farrar and Morales are limited to civil rights cases, their 27 reasoning has since been used in other contexts. In re HP Inkjet Printer Litig., 716 F.3d 1173, 28 1191, n.6 (9th Cir. 2013) (applying Farrar and concluding that the recovery was not trifle); Saul
H. Catalan v. RBC Mortgage, Co., 05-cv-6920, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 84339, *5-6 (N.D. Ill.
Sept. 16, 2009) (same).

1 were just a fraction of the damages award. And, in the antitrust cases cited by the Best Buy
2 Plaintiffs, the total fees recovered ranged between 14 and 19%.¹³

3 Here, the Court should consider the fact that the Best Buy Plaintiffs received only a 4 fraction of the direct damages they sought and failed to prove any damages on their indirect 5 purchases. The Best Buy Plaintiffs sought nearly $800 million dollars in damages for direct and 6 indirect purchases of liquid crystal products. After only one day of deliberations, the jury 7 rejected more than 99% of the Best Buy Plaintiffs' claimed damages and found that the Best Buy 8 Plaintiffs had only proved $7,471,943 in damages resulting from direct purchases. Nonetheless, 9 the Best Buy Plaintiffs seek a fee award that is massive in comparison to its verdict. Even 10 ignoring the issue of a zero judgment after setoff, the Best Buy Plaintiffs are seeking $17.9 11 million in fees and costs on a post-trebled $22.4 million verdict—a fee award equal to 80% of 12 the trebled damages award. There is nothing in the Best Buy Plaintiffs' authorities that would 13 justify the reasonableness of such a request. To confer upon the Best Buy Plaintiffs more than 14 $9.1 million in fees and $8.5 million in costs would be an unreasonable windfall and confer upon 15 the Best Buy Plaintiffs (and their counsel) a recovery the jury did not award. See Exhibitors' 16 Serv. v. American Multi-Cinema, 583 F. Supp. 1186, 1192 (C.D. Cal. 1984).

17 2. The Majority of the Best Buy Plaintiffs' Work Was Related to 18 Their Unsuccessful Toshiba Claim And Was Unnecessary to 19 Their Claims Against HannStar.

20 The Best Buy Plaintiffs' reduction in time for Toshiba-related work is insufficient and 23 ¹³ See Perkins v. Standard Oil, Co., 474 F.2d 549 (9th Cir. 1973) (antitrust plaintiff recovered 24 damages pre-trebling in excess of $330,000 and a fee award of just over $143,000 (reduced from 25 $289,000) at a post-trebling ratio of fees to damages that was just over 14%); Masimo Corp. v.

28 million in fees were awarded $7.8 million in fees at a post-trebling ratio less than 19%); Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles, 864 F.2d 1454, 1464 (9th Cir. 1988) (affirming reduction of lodestar amount by 25% because of the "limited success of the plaintiff in her suit"); Yahoo!, Inc.
v. Net Games, Inc., 329 F. Supp. 2d 1179, 1181 (N.D. Cal. 2004) (reducing plaintiff's request for fees nearly in half after finding the hours expended and fees were "unsubstantiated and unreasonably high").

1 should be further reduced.¹⁴ HannStar is among the smallest of the Defendants and, unlike many 2 of the other defendants such as Toshiba, none of its subsidiaries were named in the action. (See 3 Compl. (Docket No. 1 in C 10-4572 SI).) The Best Buy Plaintiffs engaged in minimal pretrial 4 effort directed at HannStar. And, it is undeniable that the Best Buy Plaintiffs spent little time or 5 effort on HannStar at trial. This was a natural consequence of the fact that HannStar pled guilty 6 to the alleged conspiracy in July 2010—before Best Buy Plaintiffs filed this action. Ultimately, 7 the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ case against HannStar at trial was a pure damages case. The Best Buy 8 Plaintiffs did not prove any conduct that HannStar had not already conceded years ago, and so 9 the fees they incurred should be deducted. See Wild Equity Institute at 7:3-28 (reducing fees 10 because the plaintiffs did not prove anything to which they were not already entitled); see also 11 Baughman, 583 F.2d at 1215 (Plaintiffs did not even need to “establish [defendant’s] liability as 12 a member of the conspiracy . . . [and] hours devoted in part to the case against other defendants 13 [to establish the conspiracy] may [not] be fairly charged against” the defendant.).

14 To the contrary, the majority of pretrial and trial fees since August 2012, when the 15 Toshiba entities were named in the lawsuit, were incurred in pursuing Toshiba. (See Compl.
16 (Docket No. 1 in C 12-04114 SI).) By August 2012, when Toshiba was originally named in the 17 lawsuit, HannStar and its executives had already pled guilty. Since Toshiba was originally a 18 “Track 2” case, the Best Buy Plaintiffs moved to have it advanced to “Track 1” and, as a result 19 of their choice to do so, had to take expensive expedited discovery of Toshiba in order to be trial-20 ready. (See generally Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Mot. to Consolidate at 2-3 (Docket No. 8025 in M 07-21 1827).)

22 Accordingly, the majority of the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ fees between August 2012 and up to 23 pre-trial are attributable to Toshiba. Mr. Greenfield opines that over $4.5 million (approximately 24 50% of the $9 million in requested fees) were incurred after August 2012—when Toshiba was

26 ¹⁴ The Best Buy Plaintiffs generally state that they reduced their fee request by over 11%
27 (equivalent to $1.25 million in fees) to account for both Toshiba related work and for work 28 incurred in connection with pursuing settlements with other defendants. The Best Buy Plaintiffs do not specifically indicate how much they reduced from their fee request on account of Toshiba related work. (Mot. 5:13-20.)

1 named in the suit and eight (8) months after the discovery cutoff as to HannStar. (Greenfield 2 Decl. Ex. 30.) All discovery after Toshiba entered the case was thus Toshiba-related, and not 3 directed at HannStar. (Stipulation Re. Discovery Cut-Off (Docket No. 4394 in M 07-1827 SI).)
4 Given that during this time the Best Buy Plaintiffs were preparing their case and taking 5 discovery—on an expedited basis—of Toshiba, it would be unreasonable to charge the fees 6 incurred during this period to HannStar. Indeed, in reviewing the time entries that remain even 7 after the Best Buy Plaintiffs purportedly removed Toshiba time, Mr. Greenfield believes that 8 only 20%-30% of the fees incurred from the time Toshiba was named in the action until trial are 9 properly recoverable against HannStar.¹⁵ (See Greenfield Decl. ¶¶ 57-59, Ex. 27.)

10 It is also undeniable that the majority of time spent at trial was focused on Toshiba. A 11 total of 42 witnesses testified at trial, 17 of whom were affiliated with, employees of or former 12 employees of an alleged co-conspirator, 12 were affiliated with, employees of or former 13 employees of Toshiba, five (5) were expert witnesses, seven (7) were affiliated with, employees 14 of or former employees of Best Buy and only one (1) was affiliated with HannStar. (See Rosen 15 Decl. ¶ 2.) Given the foregoing and the fact that HannStar was not contesting liability, but only 16 damages, HannStar should not be solely liable for the over $1.2 million in fees incurred by the 17 Best Buy Plaintiffs in a five week trial that included unsuccessful claims against Toshiba. (See 18 Greenfield Decl. ¶ 57, Ex. 62.) Even under a conservative estimate, HannStar is only liable, if at 19 all, for 50% of the Best Buy Plaintiffs' fees incurred in trial. (See id.)

20 The Best Buy Plaintiffs' contention that it is entitled to fees for "proving an overarching 21 conspiracy" must also be rejected. Toshiba, the principal trial target, was found not to be liable;
22 HannStar conceded liability; the Best Buy Plaintiffs entered the guilty pleas by other Defendants

24 ¹⁵ Mr. Greenfield's analysis of the number of times each Defendant is mentioned in the Best Buy 25 Plaintiffs' time entries is telling. HannStar, who was sued in 2010 and against whom the Best 26 Buy Plaintiffs went to trial, was only mentioned in 30% of the time entries. ^{REDACTED}, with whom the 27 Best Buy Plaintiffs settled, was mentioned 20% of the time despite the fact that the Best Buy 28 Plaintiffs said that they removed all entries related to time incurred for settling defendants, and Toshiba, for whom the Best Buy Plaintiffs contend they removed all time entries, continued to appear 4% of the time. (See Greenfield Decl. Ex. 21.) Using a conservative estimate, Mr.
Greenfield also opined that HannStar is only liable, if at all, for ¼ of the fees incurred before Toshiba was named, even though it was only one of ten different defendant corporate entities named. (Id. ¶ 60, Ex. 27.)

1 into evidence; and there was no meaningful proof of any other non-conceded conspiratorial 2 activity. Sound policy and common sense support this rule. “[R]equiring a losing defendant to 3 pay plaintiff for hours spent against non-losing defendants could encourage frivolous claims in 4 an effort to inflate fees. And such a policy could have an adverse effect on the conduct of 5 litigation, impelling a defendant who believes itself not to be liable to settle out of fear that it will 6 be saddled with attorney’s fees incurred by plaintiff in prosecuting his case against other, more 7 egregious offenders who choose to settle rather than risk trial.” Baughman, 583 F.2d at 1215.
8 HannStar should not be penalized because Toshiba was found not liable or because other 9 defendants chose to settle with the Best Buy Plaintiffs, especially when the amount of time and 10 energy (and thus fees) expended in litigating the claims against HannStar were de minimis as 11 compared to these other entities.¹⁶

12 3. The Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Requests Are Unreasonable and 13 Should Be Reduced On Various Additional Grounds.

14 As this Court has recognized, a district court only “begins its calculation of fees by 15 multiplying the number of hours reasonably spent on litigation by a reasonable hourly rate,” (the 16 “lodestar”), and the plaintiff bears the burden of “document[ing] the appropriate hours expended 17 in the litigation by submitting evidence in support of those hours worked.” Wild Equity Inst. at 18 5:24-28 (citing Hensley, 461 U.S. at 436); Lucas v. White, 63 F. Supp. 2d 1046, 1057 (N.D. Cal.
19 1999); Masimo, 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 101987 (emphasizing that the lodestar method requires a 20 determination of the reasonable number of hours expended).

21 Both “[f]ee applicants, and the Court, should exclude hours that are ‘excessive, 22 redundant, or otherwise unnecessary.’” Wild Equity Inst. at 6:4-5; see also Cairns v. Franklin

23 _____
24 ¹⁶ It is notable that Best Buy Plaintiffs argue in their response to Toshiba’s Bill of Cost that they 25 should not have to shoulder all of Toshiba’s costs and the Court should apportion costs, such as 26 deposition costs, between prevailing and non-prevailing parties depending on the identity of the 27 witness, and/or for whose case the evidence was elicited/utilized. (See generally Best Buy’s 28 Objections to Toshiba’s Application to Tax Costs at 2:14 to 5:13 (Docket No. 8671 in M 07-1827 SI).). The Best Buy Plaintiffs further argue that the non-prevailing party should not be responsible for costs that are attributable to another case or another party. HannStar agrees.
Applying the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ own logic here would mean that HannStar should not have to bear any of the fees that Plaintiffs incurred in pursuing other defendants, including Toshiba; yet, the Best Buy Plaintiffs would have HannStar do precisely that.

1 Mint Co., 292 F.3d 1139, 1158-59 (9th Cir. 2002) (affirming reduction of fees on account of 2 excessive hours/work). The Court should also reduce costs that are excessive, wasteful, 3 duplicative and/or improper or poorly documented. See Brookside Theater Corp., 194 F.2d at 4 859. Here, the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ request includes numerous examples of improper, inflated, 5 excessive and/or wasteful spending, as well as poorly documented costs:

6 (1) Admitted double-recovery. The Best Buy Plaintiffs admit that they are seeking 7 double recovery of costs by way of this Motion, (Mot. at 2, n.2.), and by way of their Bill of 8 Costs (Best Buy Plaintiffs’ Bill of Costs (“Bill of Costs”) Docket No. 8612 in M 07-1827)), but 9 they neither itemize nor enumerate the costs for which they seek double recovery. HannStar’s 10 review, however, reveals that, at a minimum, the Best Buy Plaintiffs seek double recovery for 51
11 of the 57 depositions listed in their Bill of Costs, translation costs and trial transcript costs, 12 amounting to more than $83,000 in costs sought here. (See Rosen Decl. ¶¶ 24, 25, Ex. 3.) In 13 addition, Best Buy Plaintiffs seek double recovery for nearly $468,000 in expert fees. (See id. ¶ 14 15.) The Court should reduce the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ request by these amounts.

15 (2) Block billed entries that include non-compensable fees. The Best Buy 16 Plaintiffs request more than $4.5 million in “block billed” time entries that include clearly non-17 compensable fees, such as tasks related solely to other Defendants. (Greenfield Decl. ¶¶ 19-21, 18 fn. 9, Ex. 9.) For example, in Welch v. Metro. Life Ins. Co., 480 F.3d 942, 948 (9th Cir. 2007), 19 the Court reduced block-billed entries because block-billing “lump[ed] together multiple tasks,” 20 making it impossible to determine whether any given entry or work description was reasonable 21 and recoverable. The Best Buy Plaintiffs’ block-billed time entries mix tasks that may have been 22 attributable to HannStar with tasks that are not recoverable here. As such, it is impossible to 23 determine how much time was spent on any specific HannStar-related task within this block of 24 time and whether that amount of time was reasonable. It also, by definition, includes time that is 25 not “necessary” and, thus, fails to meet Plaintiffs’ burden of demonstrating that time spent and 26 fee incurred were “reasonable” and “necessary.” These block-billed entries should be deducted 27 from Plaintiffs’ request or, at a minimum, reduced in amount.

28 (3) Redacted entries. Compounding the problem of block-billed entries, over

1 $415,000 in fees are both block-billed and redacted, making it nearly impossible to ascertain the 2 work performed and the reasonableness of time expended, and thus recoverable. (Id. Ex. 6.)

3 (4) Missing documentation and ambiguous expenses. The Best Buy Plaintiffs also 4 request $2.7 million in costs that lack sufficient, or any, documentation. (See Rosen Decl. ¶27.)
5 Costs that lack proper descriptions and documentation should be denied or, at a minimum, 6 reduced. See Collins v. Gorman, 96 F.3d 1057, 1058 (7th Cir. 1996) (vacating the district court’s 7 decision and disallowing full cost recovery for service fees incurred by unidentified persons 8 regarding unidentified documents and recipients). The Best Buy Plaintiffs seek nearly $1.8 9 million in line item expert fees that either lack sufficient documentation or substantiation, as well 10 as over $70,000 in ambiguous “copying” costs, and $100,000 in circumspect litigation software 11 costs. (See Rosen Decl. ¶¶ 12-17, 22, 23.) Because the Best Buy Plaintiffs bear the burden of 12 documenting all costs and expenses, the Court should reduce these amounts from any award.

13 (5) Incorrect entries for attendance at trial on weekends. The Best Buy Plaintiffs 14 seek over $100,000 in fees where the description expressly claims time billed “attending trial” on 15 either a Friday, Saturday or Sunday. (Id. ¶ 36, Ex. 12.) Since Court was dark on Fridays, 16 Saturdays and Sundays, these entries cannot be correct and, again, raise questions about the 17 accuracies of the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ requests overall. (See id. ¶ 37.)

18 (6) Vague and ambiguous entries and “trial prep” years before trial. The Best 19 Buy Plaintiffs seek more than $1 million in fees for entries that are vague and ambiguous. (Id.
20 Exs. 8, 9.) Mr. Greenfield calculated that the Best Buy Plaintiffs have more than $1 million and 21 nearly 2,000 hours of entries vaguely described as “email,” see Allen v. City of L.A., 10-4695 CS, 22 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 168247, at *50-51 (C.D. Cal. Nov. 19, 2012) (holding that entries billed 23 as “email” for the purposes of “composing and reading” electronic correspondence were 24 “difficult to parse ... for reasonableness” and reducing attorney’s fees as a result), or “review 25 documents,” or “trial prep” (or “trial” on days on which trial was not in session.) (See 26 Greenfield Decl. ¶¶ 27, 28, n.12, Exs. 8-9). In addition, some of the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ legal 27 team purportedly started preparing for trial months, if not years, before trial began. For example, 28 one paralegal’s time entries claim time for “trial preparation” in 2011, even though no trial date

1 was set and trial did not start until July 2013. (Id. Ex. 10.)

2 (7) Legal issues unrelated to HannStar. The Best Buy Plaintiffs ask HannStar to 3 compensate them for fees incurred in researching and litigating legal and factual issues that did 4 not relate to HannStar or this case at all, such as time likely spent monitoring other opt-out cases 5 ($125,000),¹⁷ time spent litigating/monitoring the Track 2 cases ($118,000), time spent 6 monitoring or otherwise participating in the class action and monitoring the class certification 7 proceedings ($71,000), time spent researching “spoliation” of evidence ($1,700), and time spent 8 pursuing legal fees from other defendants ($5,400). (See id. Exs. ¶ 54, 22-26.) This work was 9 not expended in litigating the case against HannStar, and should be reduced from any fee 10 awarded.

11 (8) Alleged co-conspirators not part of the conspiracy. The Court should also 12 reduce the fees and costs expended on the seven defendants¹⁸ whom the Court either found were 13 not part of the alleged conspiracy and/or the Best Buy Plaintiffs did not seek to prove at trial 14 were part of the alleged conspiracy. Mr. Greenfield’s analysis shows that the Best Buy Plaintiffs 15 incurred nearly $100,000 and 250 hours litigating against these seven (7) companies, which 16 should be deducted from the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ request. (Id. ¶ 54(a), Ex. 20.)

17 (9) Boilerplate entries that repeat themselves for months on end. The Best Buy 18 Plaintiffs also seek recovery of boilerplate, near verbatim time entries that repeat for days and/or 19 months on end in near identical time intervals. For example, at least two different paralegals at 20 RKMC billed 7.5 hours per days for days on end that had the same description detail, for a total
21 billed by these two individuals to this matter of over $500,000. (See id. ¶¶ 29, 30, Exs. 10-11.)
22 It is questionable that these individuals were in fact doing the same exact type of work on this 23

24 ¹⁷ In his Declaration, Mr. Geibelson indicates that time spent working on the class action case 25 and on other opt-out cases were removed from this fees request. (Geibelson Decl. ¶ 13.) The 26 time entries, however, suggest that not all of this time was properly removed, (see Greenfield 27 Decl. ¶ 54, Exs. 22-26), and should thus be deducted.

28 ¹⁸ These defendants are: Acer Display Co.; NEC LCD Technologies Ltd.; Hydix Technologies
Co., Ltd (BOE Hydix Technology Co., Ltd.); Unipac Optoelectronics; Mitsubishi Electronics
Corp.; Royal Philips Electronics N.V.; Toppoly Optoelectronics. (HannStar Display
Corporation’s Notice of Motion and Motion for Judgment as a Matter of Law Pursuant to Rule 50(b) at 5-10 (Docket No. 8653 in M 07-1827 SI).)

1 case every day for months on end in for, in most cases, exactly 7.5 hours of billable time, and 2 thus suggests that these individuals and others were not recording the work performed, and time
3 billed with sufficient detail. (Id.)

4 (10) The Best Buy Plaintiffs' Accounting Error. The Best Buy Plaintiffs state that 5 they applied a 5% discount to all fee entries associated presented in their Motion. Mr. Greenfield 6 found, however, that the Best Buy Plaintiffs failed to apply this 5% discount as to a substantial 7 number of entries, resulting in a nearly $80,000 overcharge to HannStar. (See id. ¶ 17). The 8 Court should deduct this amount from any fees awarded.

9 G. The Best Buy Plaintiffs Can Only Recover "Costs" That Are Specifically 10 Authorized By Statute.

11 Finally, the Best Buy Plaintiffs misunderstand the "costs of suit" available under the 12 Clayton Act, and their $8,550,525.26 in "costs" should be rejected. Long ago, the Ninth Circuit 13 made clear that the Clayton Act does not authorize the recovery of any additional "costs" beyond 14 what is already taxable to a prevailing party. Goldwyn, 328 F.2d at 224 ("We hold that the only 15 costs recoverable by a successful plaintiff in a private antitrust suit are those which are normally 16 allowable under 28 U.S.C. § 1920 and Rule 54(d). . ."). The Supreme Court has since made 17 clear: "absent explicit statutory or contractual authorization for the taxation of the expenses of a 18 litigant's witness as costs, federal courts are bound by the limitations set out in 28 U.S.C. § 1821 19 and § 1920." Crawford Fitting Co. v. J.T. Gibbons, Inc., 482 U.S. 437, 445 (1987). Taxable 20 costs include certain reproduction and transcripts costs, witness appearance fees, and docketing 21 fees, see 28 U.S.C. § 1920, already claimed on the Best Buy Plaintiffs' Bill of Costs, and do not 22 include any of the following:¹⁹

23 (1) Expert witness fees. Expert witness fees are not compensable as attorney's fees 24 under the Clayton Act. Seven Gables Corp. v. Sterling Recreation Org., 686 F. Supp. 1418,

25 _____
26 ¹⁹ For example, Best Buy Plaintiffs claim approximately $350,000 in non-taxable, non-27 recoverable travel, lodging and subsistence fees and expenses for themselves. (See Declaration 28 of Michael Geibelson in support of Best Buy Plaintiffs' Mot., Ex. B ("Geibelson Decl.") (Docket
No. 8610-2 in M 07-1827).) They also claim over $30,000 in online research and computer fees, which are not taxable. (See id.) Similarly, they claim over $7,500 in expedited delivery and messenger fees, which are not taxable to HannStar. (See id.)

1 1421 (W.D. Wash. 1988) (citing Crawford Fitting and denying successful antitrust plaintiff's
2 request for $121,024.35 in expert witness fees). This is because neither 28 U.S.C. § 1821 nor 28
3 U.S.C. § 1920 allow costs paid to expert witnesses, other than the $40 per day in subsistence
4 fees, travel fees and appearance fees under 28 U.S.C. § 1821(b). Id. (“[t]he court does not 5 interpret the provisions of the Clayton Act providing for recovery of attorney’s fees as explicit 6 statutory authorization for compensating plaintiff for fees paid to experts beyond that authorized 7 by the cost statutes”); see also U.S. Industries, Inc. v. Norton Co., 578 F. Supp. 1561, 1568 (2d 8 Cir. 1984) (“The Court of Appeals, Second Circuit, has expressed unequivocally that a prevailing 9 party under this antitrust statute [the Clayton Act] is not to be compensated for fees paid to an 10 expert witness as a cost of suit under the statute.”) (citations omitted). Similarly, costs incurred 11 in connection with other retained or engaged professionals such as jury consultants and outside 12 trial consultants, are also not recoverable as non-taxable costs. See Theme Promotions, Inc. v.
13 News Am. Mktg. FSI, Inc., 731 F. Supp. 2d. 937 (N.D. Cal. 2010) (disallowing cost recovery for 14 outside trial consultants); see also Pacific West Cable Co. v. Sacramento, 693 F. Supp. 865 (E.D.
15 Cal. 1988) (disallowing cost recovery of expert witnesses and consultants beyond statutory limits 16 set by 28 U.S.C. §§ 1821 and 1920).

17 Here, Best Buy seeks more than $7.6 million in “professional” fees attributable to experts 18 and non-testifying outside consultants, including more than $7.2 million spent on expert witness 19 fees. (See Rosen Decl. ¶¶ 10; See Declaration of Michael Geibelson in support of Best Buy 20 Plaintiffs’ Mot., Ex. B at 10, 115-16 (“Geibelson Decl.”) (Docket No. 8610-2 in M 07-1827).) 21 Remarkably, the Best Buy Plaintiffs attempt to pass-off more than $182,000 in late fees and 22 accrued interest as part of these expert fees. (See Rosen Decl. ¶ 18.) HannStar should not be 23 held liable for the Best Buy Plaintiffs’ failure to pay their bills in a timely manner. Their expert 24 witness fees also include nearly $1.8 million in line item expert fees without sufficient 25 documentation or substantiation, (see id. ¶¶ 12-17), and nearly $468,000 in the same expert fees
26 are sought twice. (See id. ¶ 15.) The Court should reject the $7.6 million in expert witness fees 27 as non-taxable or, at a minimum, reduce that amount to account for these late fees, lack of 28 documentation, and double recovery.

1 (2) ESI Consultants and Technical Advisors. Likewise, fees paid to non-testifying 2 professionals such as ESI consultants and technical advisors are non-taxable and, thus, cannot be 3 recovered as costs. Theme Promotions, Inc., 731 F. Supp. 2d. 937; Pacific West Cable Co., 693
4 F. Supp. 865; see 28 U.S.C. §§ 1821, 1920. Here, the Best Buy Plaintiffs seek recovery of more 5 than 2,000 hours and more than $500,000 in time billed by non-lawyer, non-para-professional 6 “Technical Advisor” time. However, these “Technical Advisors” are not, as they were titled by 7 the Best Buy Plaintiffs for the purposes of this Motion, database or information technology or 8 computer specialists, but sophisticated accounting and financial experts employed in-house in the 9 Financial and Economic Consultants Practice²⁰ at RKMC. (See Greenfield Decl. ¶¶ 67-69, Exs.
10 3, 30, 31). In addition, the Best Buy Plaintiffs request non-recoverable fees incurred by “in-11 house” ESI consultants and “Database Specialists.” In total, the Best Buy Plaintiffs seek nearly 12 $1 million dollars for technical staff time. (See id. Ex. 3, ¶ 69.)

13 However, courts routinely refuse to tax accountants, computer retrieval services and 14 media-related work. See Berkey Photo, Inc. v. Eastman Kodak Co., 603 F.2d 263, 309 n.75 (2d 15 Cir. 1979) (computer services); El Dorado Irrigation Dist. v. Traylor Bros., Inc., 03-949-LKK, 16 2007 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 31638, *13-14,*16 (E.D. Cal. April 13, 2007) (media-related work and 17 in-house counsel); Goldwyn, 328 F.2d at 224 (accountants).²¹ By including these attorney’s fees 18 as costs, the Best Buy Plaintiffs seek to bypass well-settled law that these are not taxable costs.
19 The fact that these ESI consultants and technical advisors are “in-house” staff does not alter this 20 conclusion. Furthermore, the time billed by these Technical Advisors and ESI technicians and 21 database specialists are vague and unclear, and the Best Buy Plaintiffs make no effort to justify 22 the work these professionals performed or to establish that they were necessary and reasonable.
23 See Cabrales v. County of Los Angeles, 864 F.2d at 1467 (9th Cir. 1988). The Best Buy

24
25 ²⁰ See <http://www.rkmc.com/services/financial-and-economic-consultants>.

26 ²¹ These professionals are similar to accountants, whose time/fees courts routinely refuse to 27 reimburse. See Exhibitors’ Serv., 583 F. Supp. at 1195 (refusing to reimburse two accountants 28 who billed time, ostensibly in support of the litigation, but who never testified); see also Brager & Co. v. Leumi Sec. Corp., 530 F. Supp. 1361, 1364 (S.D.N.Y. 1982) (refusing to reimburse for the services of a professional accounting firm that prepared documents considered by the experts).

1 Plaintiffs have not properly documented or sufficiently supported these fees and cannot convert 2 non-taxable costs into recoverable fees merely by bringing consultants in-house and putting them 3 on staff. The Court should deny the Best Buy's Plaintiffs' request for these fees and deduct the 4 near $1 million in fees billed by these Technical Advisors and ESI technicians and database 5 specialists.

6 III. CONCLUSION.

7 The Best Buy Plaintiffs' request for more than $17.6 million in fees and costs should be 8 denied. By operation of the FTAIA, the Best Buy Plaintiffs claims are outside the Sherman Act 9 and cannot serve as a basis for a fee award. The Best Buy Plaintiffs' request should also be 10 subject to the more than $229 million settlement offset and denied as a result. There are 11 numerous additional grounds for rejecting and reducing the Best Buy Plaintiffs' request for fees 12 and costs, including the unavailability of many of these requested costs as a matter of law, 13 numerous inaccuracies, errors, and a lack of documentation. It would unreasonable to award 14 more than $17.6 million in fees and costs on a $22 million treble damages award and a zero 15 dollar recovery. This Court should deny the Best Buy Plaintiffs' Motion for attorney's fees and 16 costs.
