ANSWER OF DEFENDANT VISA INC.

Defendant Visa Inc. (“Visa”) by and through its undersigned counsel, answers as follows the allegations of the Complaint filed on November 5, 2020 (the “Complaint”), by the United States (“Plaintiff”). Except for those allegations expressly admitted herein, Visa denies each and every allegation in the Complaint. Except as noted herein, Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations regarding statements made in internal documents by Plaid Inc. (“Plaid”), or any other allegations regarding non-public statements, commercial plans, or intentions of companies other than Visa. Visa expressly denies that Plaintiff is entitled to the relief requested or any other relief. Visa reserves the right to amend this Answer.

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

This is an action by the United States seeking to enjoin Visa’s proposed acquisition of Plaid under the antitrust laws. As Plaintiff concedes, Plaid and Visa are not competitors today; instead, Plaintiff’s Complaint postulates that the proposed acquisition threatens competition because Plaid is supposedly a potential competitor to Visa in an alleged market for online debit transactions. “Potential competition” theories like this one have for decades been evaluated under Section 7 of the Clayton Act—the federal antitrust statute specifically designed to address mergers—and have found almost no traction in the courts. Likely aware that potential competition cases are extremely difficult to win, Plaintiff has tacked on a Section 2 Sherman Act claim in the apparent hope of avoiding unfavorable Section 7 precedent. That choice is puzzling because Section 2, which prohibits monopolization, imposes equally—if not more—stringent evidentiary requirements on Plaintiff than does Section 7. In any event, regardless of which statute is ultimately applied, Plaintiff’s misconceived “potential competition” theory of harm fails on the facts. Plaintiff’s narrative—that Visa is acquiring Plaid in order to crush a (purportedly) unique dangerous threat to a (supposed) monopoly—is nothing more than a patchwork of excerpted party documents and testimony taken out of context, stitched together with conclusory allegations where facts do not exist, and embellished with irrelevant and stale customer complaints unrelated to Plaid and this acquisition.

1 In reality, the significant, tangible, near-term benefits that will be derived from the 2 transaction simply dwarf the highly remote and speculative risk of anticompetitive effects that 3 Plaintiff posits.

4 Visa and Plaid operate in different but complementary spheres. Visa’s core competency is 5 facilitating consumer-to-business (C2B) transactions. Visa operates a payment network that allows 6 hundreds of millions of consumers to pay for goods and services at millions of merchants in the 7 United States and around the world using Visa-branded debit, credit, and prepaid cards.¹ Visa’s 8 payment network competes with other card-based networks including Mastercard, Discover, and 9 American Express, other payment methods commonly used by consumers, such as cash, check, and 10 ACH (Automated Clearing House), and competing debit networks including Accel, Star, NYCE, 11 and Pulse. Plaid, by contrast, plays no role in this C2B payment ecosystem. Plaid’s core 12 competency is enabling users to “connect” their financial accounts to apps from financial 13 technology firms (“fintechs”) through its application programming interfaces (APIs). In essence, 14 Plaid moves data, not money, and it competes with other “connector” firms such as Fincity and 15 Yodlee.

16 Visa’s motivation to acquire Plaid—and Visa’s valuation of Plaid—is founded on the 17 growth of this “connector” segment and driven by the opportunity for Visa to develop closer 18 relationships with the proliferating ecosystem of fintechs, and by the promise of creating new value 19 by combining Visa’s and Plaid’s complementary capabilities. Notably, these very same 20 opportunities drove Mastercard to acquire Plaid’s competitor Fincity—as Mastercard president 21 Michael Miebach stated when announcing the deal, “[w]ith the addition of Fincity, we expect to 22 not only advance our open banking strategy, but enhance how we support and accelerate today’s 23 digital economy across several markets.”² The Mastercard/Fincity transaction is the mirror image

26 ¹ Debit cards allow consumers to access funds in a demand deposit account with a financial 27 institution. Credit cards allow consumers to access a line of revolving credit that has been granted 28 by a financial institution. Prepaid cards allow consumers to access funds that have been pre-loaded onto the card by the consumer through some other payment mechanism (including cash).

² Mastercard to Acquire Fincity to Advance Open Banking Strategy, Mastercard Investor Relations (June 23, 2020), <https://investor.mastercard.com/investor-news/investor-news-details/2020/Mastercard-to-Acquire-Fincity-to-Advance-Open-Banking-Strategy/default.aspx>.

1 of the Visa-Plaid acquisition, and one that Plaintiff approved shortly after it filed this Complaint.

2 Plaintiff dismisses these obvious complementarities and procompetitive opportunities, and 3 seeks to portray Visa as motivated by fear that Plaid was building a C2B payments network 4 allowing consumers to pay for purchases directly from their bank accounts (a “pay-by-bank” 5 (PBB) platform). But Plaintiff ignores that Plaid’s research and development efforts—consisting 6 of a small number of pipeline products that Plaid began developing only months before the 7 transaction discussions began—do not actually constitute a PBB platform that would compete with 8 Visa’s debit products for C2B transactions. Nor does Plaintiff provide a shred of detail as to how 9 or when these pipeline products would evolve into a competing product with commercial 10 acceptance. And, mystifyingly, the Complaint paints Plaid as a unique entrant into the alleged 11 “online debit” market, when existing players with existing payments relationships with both 12 merchants and consumers (such as providers of payment processing and digital wallets) are far 13 better situated to enter. Plaintiff’s misguided effort to block Visa’s acquisition of Plaid, while 14 simultaneously approving the acquisition of one of Plaid’s major competitors (Fincity) by Visa’s 15 principal competitor (Mastercard), when Mastercard has announced plans to do with Fincity just 16 what Visa intends to do with Plaid, creates an unlevel playing field in emerging product spaces and 17 seeks to deprive consumers of robust competition between Mastercard/Fincity and Visa/Plaid. In 18 fact, Mastercard/Fincity wasted no time—a little over a week after the Mastercard/Fincity 19 transaction was approved by the DOJ, Fincity announced Fincity Pay, “an integrated solution set 20 that enables payments, account creation, and fraud mitigation.”³

21 While Plaintiff may wish away the substantial body of evidence demonstrating Visa’s 22 procompetitive motivations and plans, Plaintiff will face a heavy burden in proving each of the 23 requisite elements of Section 2 and Section 7. The allegations Plaintiff offers to satisfy those 24 elements strain credulity.

25 First, Plaintiff seeks to gerrymander a relevant product market of “online debit 26 transactions” to artificially inflate Visa’s market share. The made-for-litigation nature of this

27
28 _____
³ Lisa Kimball, Fincity Pay for Faster Payments, Instant Account Verification, Less Fraud, Fincity (November 24, 2020), <https://www.fincity.com/fincity-pay-instant-account-verification/>.

1 market is patently evident upon examination of the transactions purportedly included in the market 2 and transactions Plaintiff has excluded. The purported market excludes credit cards, which are 3 functionally interchangeable with debit for online transactions, but it includes PBB platforms—
4 which Plaintiff admits do not yet exist in the United States. Plaintiff merely assumes that if PBB 5 platforms do take hold in this country they will be sufficiently interchangeable with debit to 6 constrain debit pricing. Plaintiff excludes online transactions effected directly using ACH, but, 7 contradictorily, includes PBB platforms that use ACH for clearing and settlement. This highly-8 engineered, outcome-driven product market definition is facially defective and is on its own fatal to 9 Plaintiff's case.

10 Second, Plaintiff puts forward the dubious assertion that Visa is a monopolist in this 11 contrived market. The Supreme Court has made clear that high market shares alone are not 12 sufficient to find monopoly power, which it has defined as the unilateral ability to control prices 13 and exclude competition. Plaintiff asks this Court to find that Mastercard, whose market 14 capitalization ranks in the Top 15 of U.S. companies and processed more than $3 trillion in total 15 debit transactions worldwide last year, is a fringe competitor with no meaningful ability to act as a 16 check on Visa. Nothing could be further from the truth. In recent years, Mastercard has convinced 17 numerous banks to switch their debit card portfolios from Visa to Mastercard and competition has 18 driven down overall pricing on accounts. Were Visa to raise the price of debit transactions to 19 market participants, Mastercard would have the ability to significantly expand the number of debit 20 transactions it processes. These facts are fundamentally inconsistent with any notion that Visa has 21 the unilateral ability to dictate market prices and output.

22 Third, Plaintiff would have this Court believe that Plaid is in the near future poised to create 23 a compelling two-sided payment network capable of competing with Visa—despite Plaid's 24 pipeline products having no consumer awareness or merchant adoption, Plaid having no experience 25 in the payments space, being nowhere close to having the requisite feature set to operate a network 26 (such as chargeback rules, dispute management, and consumer purchase protection), and having no 27 reasonable path to developing all of these necessary features or relationships. To be clear, Plaid is 28 not a payment processor and its products do not move money. Plaid's alleged "pay-by-bank" debit

1 service today consists entirely of research and development products that are principally designed 2 to help Plaid’s fintech customers with peer-to-peer and account-to-account use cases. These ideas
3 could be construed as a first attempt at a basic money movement offering designed for Plaid’s 4 fintech customers by a data aggregation company with no prior payments experience, but in no 5 universe could they be seen as a potential rival to the established, sophisticated debit networks 6 trusted by consumers and merchants alike.

7 Fourth, Plaintiff alleges that, notwithstanding this vast chasm between Plaid’s current 8 capabilities and the debit networks operated by Visa, Mastercard, and others, Plaid is “uniquely 9 positioned” to introduce a PBB debit service in competition with Visa. Such a claim defies 10 common sense in the face of a long list of potential entrants better positioned than Plaid to 11 introduce a competitive PBB debit service. The most obvious entity better positioned to introduce 12 a PBB debit service is Mastercard, which already operates a PBB platform outside the United 13 States, and has explicitly communicated publicly that it intends to use its acquisition of Finicity to 14 accelerate its foray into account-based payments. American Express and the dozen-plus PIN debit 15 networks are also much more likely potential entrants, given that they already operate sophisticated 16 two-sided payment networks. Others with significantly greater payments experience, consumer 17 brand awareness, and/or merchant relationships than Plaid include PayPal, Apple, Google, Stripe, 18 Square, Zelle, and FIS.

19 Finally, Plaintiff summarily dismisses the substantial efficiencies that would be generated 20 by the transaction. The Complaint omits any mention of Visa’s plans to integrate payment 21 functionality into Plaid’s APIs, creating new and valuable solutions for Plaid’s customers, or of 22 Visa’s plans to accelerate Plaid’s entry into markets outside the United States. Presumably in an 23 effort to undermine these benefits, Plaintiff focuses on “cost dissynergies” that it contends are 24 associated with the transaction—neglecting to explain that these cost dissynergies are, in reality, 25 pro-competitive investments that Visa plans to make for the purpose of enhancing the functionality 26 and security of Plaid’s products.

27 For these reasons, and others described below and to be presented at trial, Plaintiff’s claims 28 are entirely without merit.

SPECIFIC RESPONSES TO PLAINTIFF’S ALLEGATIONS

I. INTRODUCTION⁴

1. Visa admits that “everywhere you want to be” is Visa’s corporate slogan for all of its products, including credit cards, debit cards, and digital payments, and that Visa offers consumers a wide array of payment alternatives. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 1, and therefore denies the allegations.
2. Visa admits that American consumers make purchases online. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 2, and therefore denies the allegations.
3. Visa admits that American consumers use various payment options, including debit and credit cards, to buy goods and services on the internet. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 3, and therefore denies the allegations.
4. Paragraph No. 4 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations. Visa admits the second sentence of Paragraph No. 4. To the extent that the allegations in the fourth sentence of Paragraph No. 4 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a complete and accurate description of their contents. To the extent that the fourth sentence of Paragraph No. 4 purports to quote testimony, Visa respectfully refers the Court to the testimony cited therein in their entirety for a complete and accurate description of their contents. Visa denies the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 4.
5. Paragraph No. 5 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations. Visa admits its debit products

⁴ For ease of reference, Visa’s Answer replicates the headings in the Complaint. Although Visa believes no response is required to such headings, to the extent a response is deemed required and to the extent those headings and titles could be construed to contain factual allegations, those allegations are denied.

1 compete against Mastercard products, along with cash, checks, other credit cards, other debit 2 networks, and other payment mechanisms. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to 3 form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 5, and therefore 4 denies the allegations.

5 6. Denied.

6 7. Paragraph No. 7 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
7 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations. Visa admits Plaid has built an 8 impressive connector business, which is one of the reasons Visa is seeking to acquire Plaid.
9 Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining
10 allegations in Paragraph No. 7, and therefore denies the allegations.

11 8. Visa admits that Plaid does not compete with Visa. Paragraph No. 8 contains legal arguments 12 and conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is required, Visa 13 denies the allegations. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to 14 the second sentence of Paragraph No. 8, and therefore denies the allegations. To the extent 15 that the allegations in Paragraph No. 8 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa
16 respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a 17 complete and accurate description of their contents. Visa denies the remaining allegations in 18 Paragraph No. 8.

19 9. To the extent that the allegations in Paragraph No. 9 purport to quote documents and/or 20 statements, Visa respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their 21 entirety for a complete and accurate description of their contents. To the extent that the fourth 22 sentence of Paragraph No. 9 purports to quote testimony, Visa respectfully refers the Court to 23 the testimony cited therein in its entirety for a complete and accurate description of its 24 contents. Visa denies the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 9.

25 10. Visa admits the first sentence of Paragraph No. 10. To the extent that the allegations in 26 Paragraph No. 10 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa respectfully refers the 27 Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a complete and accurate 28 description of their contents. Visa denies the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 10.

- 1 11. To the extent that the allegations in Paragraph No. 11 purport to quote documents and/or
2 statements, Visa respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their 3 entirety for a complete and accurate description of their contents. Visa denies the remaining 4 allegations in Paragraph No. 11.
- 5 12. Visa admits that Visa agreed to acquire Plaid for $5.3 billion on January 13, 2020. Paragraph 6 No. 12 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required. To the 7 extent a response is required, Visa denies that Visa’s decision to buy Plaid was motivated by a 8 desire to eliminate purported risks alleged in the Complaint; rather Visa agreed to acquire 9 Plaid to diversify and grow its business. To the extent that the allegations in Paragraph No. 12 10 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa respectfully refers the Court to those 11 documents and/or statements in their entirety for a complete and accurate description of their 12 contents. Visa denies the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 12.
- 13 13. Paragraph No. 13 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
14 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations.
- 15 14. Paragraph No. 14 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
16 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations.

17 II. JURISDICTION

- 18 15. The allegations in Paragraph No. 15 are legal conclusions and therefore do not require a 19 response. However, Visa does not contest that the Court has subject-matter jurisdiction over 20 this dispute and on that basis admits that the Court has jurisdiction in this matter, but denies 21 that Visa’s acquisition of Plaid violates Section 2 of the Sherman Act or Section 7 of the 22 Clayton Act.
- 23 16. The allegations in the first and third sentences sentence of Paragraph No. 16 are legal 24 conclusions and therefore do not require a response. Visa does not contest that the Court has 25 jurisdiction in this matter. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as 26 to what constitutes “online debit services” or “data aggregation services” and on that basis 27 denies the allegations in the second sentence of Paragraph No. 16.
28

1 17. The allegation in the first sentence of Paragraph No. 17 is a legal conclusion and therefore 2 does not require a response. However, Visa does not contest that the Court has personal 3 jurisdiction as to Visa and on that basis admits the allegations in the first sentence of 4 Paragraph No. 17 to the extent they are directed at Visa. Visa admits that Visa transacts
5 business within this District. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief 6 as to what constitutes “online debit transactions” or “data aggregation services” and on that 7 basis denies the allegations in the second sentence of Paragraph No. 17. Visa lacks 8 knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining 9 allegations in Paragraph No. 17, and therefore denies the allegations.

10 III. VENUE

11 18. The allegations in Paragraph No. 18 are legal conclusions and therefore do not require a 12 response. However, Visa does not contest that venue is proper in this district and on that basis 13 admits the allegations in Paragraph No. 18 to the extent they are directed to Visa. Visa admits 14 the allegations in the second sentence of Paragraph No. 18 to the extent they are directed to 15 Visa. Visa otherwise lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth 16 of the allegations in Paragraph No. 18, and therefore denies the allegations.

17 IV. INTRADISTRICT ASSIGNMENT

18 19. The allegations in Paragraph No. 19 are legal conclusions and therefore do not require a 19 response. However, Visa does not contest that assignment to the San Francisco Division is 20 proper and on that basis admits that it is headquartered in the San Francisco Bay Area. Visa 21 lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations in 22 Paragraph No. 19, and therefore denies the allegations.

23 V. DEFENDANTS AND THE PROPOSED ACQUISITION

24 20. Visa admits that it is a Delaware company headquartered in the San Francisco Bay Area in 25 California, and that Visa is a global payments company. Visa lacks knowledge or information 26 sufficient to form a belief as to what constitutes the “largest” debit network in the United 27 States, and on that basis denies the allegations in the second sentence of Paragraph No. 20.
28 Visa admits the third and fourth sentences of Paragraph No. 20.

1 21. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 2 allegations in Paragraph No. 21 and on that basis denies those allegations.

3 22. Admitted.

4 VI. BACKGROUND

5 23. Admitted as to transactions processed through Visa's debit networks. Visa lacks knowledge 6 or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations in Paragraph No. 23 7 to the extent that they purport to describe other debit networks.

8 24. Admitted as to transactions processed through Visa's debit networks.. Additionally, Visa 9 admits that its debit transactions are processed in substantially the same way regardless of 10 whether it is initiated online or at the physical point of sale. Visa lacks knowledge or 11 information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations in Paragraph No. 24 to 12 the extent that they purport to describe other debit networks.

13 A. Visa is a Monopolist in Online Debit Services

14 25. Paragraph No. 25 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
15 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations. Visa competes against cash, 16 checks, credit cards, other debit providers, and other payment mechanisms, for transactions 17 made on the internet.

18 26. Paragraph No. 26 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
19 To the extent a response is required, Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a 20 belief as to the truth of the allegations in Paragraph No. 26, and therefore denies the 21 allegations.

22 27. Paragraph No. 27 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
23 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations.

24 28. Denied.

25 29. Visa admits that consumers do not pay Visa directly to use the Visa network. Visa denies the 26 remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 29.

27 30. Visa admits that Congress enacted the Durbin Amendment of the 2010 Dodd-Frank Wall 28 Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act, Pub. L. No. 111-203, 124 Stat. 1376 (2010). To

1 the extent that the allegations in Paragraph No. 30 purport to quote the Durbin Amendment, 2 Visa respectfully refers the Court to the amendment in its entirety for a complete and accurate 3 description of its contents. Visa respectfully refers the Court to the full amendment for a 4 complete understanding of its contents. The remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 30 5 contain legal conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is 6 required, Visa denies the allegations.

7 31. Visa admits that the Durbin Amendment regulates only interchange fees. The final sentence 8 in Paragraph No. 31 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is 9 required. To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations. Visa denies the 10 remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 31.

11 32. Visa admits that the Durbin Amendment requires Visa and Mastercard debit cards to be 12 enabled with at least one other unaffiliated debit network, such as a so-called “PIN” debit 13 network. Visa admits that Accel, Star, NYCE, and Pulse are competing debit networks. The 14 remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 32 contain legal arguments and conclusions to which 15 no response is required. To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations.

16 B. Pay-by-Bank is a New Form of Online Debit Service that Threatens Visa’s
17 Monopoly

18 33. Visa denies the allegations in the first sentence of Paragraph No. 33. Visa lacks knowledge or 19 information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations in Paragraph 20 No. 33, and therefore denies the allegations.

21 34. Visa admits that pay-by-bank debit services are used in other countries, but not within the 22 United States. Visa admits that pay-by-bank debit services could utilize Automated Clearing 23 House. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 24 remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 34, and therefore denies the allegations.

25 35. Visa admits the first sentence in Paragraph No. 35. Visa lacks knowledge or information 26 sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 35, and 27 therefore denies the allegations. The second sentence of Paragraph No. 35 contains legal 28

1 arguments to which no response is required. To the extent a response is required, Visa denies 2 the allegations.

3 36. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 4 allegations in Paragraph No. 36, and therefore denies the allegations.

5 C. Plaid is Uniquely Situated to Challenge Visa

6 37. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 7 allegations in Paragraph No. 37, and therefore denies the allegations.

8 38. Paragraph No. 38 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
9 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations. Visa lacks knowledge or 10 information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the allegations in Paragraph No. 38, 11 and therefore denies the allegations.

12 39. Visa admits Plaid has built an impressive connector business, which is one of the reasons Visa 13 is seeking to acquire Plaid. To the extent that the allegations in Paragraph No. 39 purport to 14 quote documents and/or statements, Visa respectfully refers the Court to those documents 15 and/or statements in their entirety for a complete and accurate description of their contents.
16 Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the remaining 17 allegations in Paragraph No. 39. To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the 18 allegations.

19 40. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 20 allegations in Paragraph No. 40, and therefore denies the allegations. To the extent that the 21 allegations in Paragraph No. 40 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa
22 respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a 23 complete and accurate description of their contents.

24 41. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 25 allegations in Paragraph No. 41, and therefore denies the allegations.

1 D. Visa Intends to Buy Plaid to Extinguish this Threat and Protect its U.S. Online
2 Debit Monopoly

3 42. Visa admits the first sentence of Paragraph No. 42. Visa denies the remaining allegations in 4 Paragraph No. 42.

5 43. Visa admits that it conducted due diligence into Plaid. To the extent that the allegations in 6 Paragraph No. 43 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa respectfully refers the 7 Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a complete and accurate 8 description of their contents. Further, the allegations in Paragraph No. 43 contain legal 9 arguments and conclusions to which no response is required. To the extent a response is 10 required, Visa denies the remaining allegations in Paragraph No. 43.

11 44. Visa admits that executives from both firms met in November 2019. To the extent that the 12 allegations in Paragraph No. 44 purport to quote documents and/or statements, Visa
13 respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a 14 complete and accurate description of their contents.

15 E. Visa Has a History of Impeding Entry and Expansion into Online Debit 16 Services

17 45. Paragraph No. 45 contains legal arguments and conclusions to which no response is required.
18 To the extent a response is required, Visa denies the allegations.

19 46. Visa lacks knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief as to the truth of the 20 allegations in the first sentence of Paragraph No. 46, and therefore denies the same. To the 21 extent that the allegations in Paragraph No. 46 purport to quote documents and/or statements, 22 Visa respectfully refers the Court to those documents and/or statements in their entirety for a 23 complete and accurate description of their contents. To the extent that the third sentence of
