INTRODUCTION

2 The substitution of Barbara Bennett after the last witness of “her” trial case had begun 3 cannot be expected to safeguard adequately the interests of the absent class. Before taking the 4 reins of this action seeking a $1 billion judgment, she had read one five-page summary prepared 5 by counsel and seen a few press reports. When deposed, she professed to know little about the 6 case, most of what she said she knew about the case was simply inaccurate, and she repeatedly 7 made clear she had no interest in learning the truth.

8 Her substitution is also too late. The former representatives both lacked standing for a 9 year before trial, including the critical pretrial preparation period. They were representatives in 10 name only. And they were actually inadequate during that time, as demonstrated by, among other 11 things, allowing the lawyers ostensibly representing them to forfeit any claim for damages by 12 them. The reality is that this is, and has been, a case driven and controlled by the class lawyers, 13 without a representative to work with them, and the appointment of Ms. Bennett will not change 14 that.

15 Mid-trial substitution would also prejudice Apple because it lacked a reasonable 16 opportunity to investigate and present any individual issues regarding Ms. Bennett at trial.

17 If Ms. Bennett is allowed as a class representative, Apple respectfully requests that class 18 counsel not be permitted at closing argument to refer to her beyond what is in the Court’s 19 instruction.

20 Finally, while Apple does not repeat the previously-rejected arguments at full length, Ms.
21 Bennett is also not an adequate representative for each of the reasons previously articulated by 22 Apple in moving to decertify the class and in seeking to dismiss this action for lack of subject 23 matter jurisdiction.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

24
25 Former named plaintiffs were Somtai Charoensak, Melanie Wilson (formerly Tucker), 26 and Marianna Rosen, each an individual consumer, none of whom had purchased from Apple any 27 of the iPod models of the type for which damages are sought at trial in this case.

28 On November 22, 2011, Judge Ware certified a class that included purchasers of Classic

1 Fifth Generation model iPods and other models.

2 During merits discovery in March 2013, review of the source code showed that certain 3 iPod models that were included in the class definition, including the iPod Classic Fifth Generation 4 model, did not contain the keybag integrity check or database integrity check for music which are 5 the subject of the trial in this case. Apple immediately informed counsel for Plaintiffs (Dkt. 964
6 at ECF p. 2, ¶ 8), and Plaintiffs' technical expert, Dr. Martin, took this information into account 7 in his April 8, 2013 report. (April 8, 2013 Martin Report at 34, ¶ 84) Plaintiffs' economic expert, 8 Dr. Noll, issued a new damages report on November 25, 2013, which concluded there was no 9 alleged overcharge on Classic Fifth Generation iPods as well as the other models that did not 10 contain the integrity checks. (Nov. 25, 2013 Noll Report, Ex. 5-A and 5-B (revised "Apple 11 Reseller Sales Damages Models" and "Apple Direct Sales Damages Models")) That was made 12 clear by Dr. Noll in his December 18, 2013 deposition. (Dec. 18, 2013 Noll Dep. at 62:3-9)

13 From the end of 2013 until trial, therefore, Plaintiffs proceeded without a class 14 representative who had purchased an iPod model on which Dr. Noll had calculated damages.

15 Former named Plaintiffs formally dropped out of the case one by one. Somtai Charoensak 16 dropped out as a class representative at the time of the pretrial statement because "he did not 17 purchase an iPod during the currently certified Class Period." (Oct. 14, 2014 Joint Pre-Trial 18 Conf. Stmt., Dkt. 823 at ECF p. 1 n.1) After counsel conceded that Melanie Wilson (formerly 19 Tucker) had not purchased a claim for which there was damages, (Tr. 640:23-24, 641:19-21), Ms.
20 Wilson dropped out on December 5, 2014, (Tr. 890:21-891:1). And the Court, on December 8, 21 2014 concluded that Ms. Rosen had not made a purchase of an affected model. (See Tr. 1303:22-22 1304:4)

23 After that determination, trial continued. On December 8, at about 6:43 pm, counsel 24 disclosed the name Barbara Bennett and sent Apple's counsel a receipt for an iPod purchase.
25 (Declaration of Kieran P. Ringgenberg ("Ringgenberg Decl.") Ex. A) The next day, she testified 26 at an evidentiary hearing. She later sat for a short deposition.

27 Prior to seeking appointment as a class representative, Ms. Bennett had exchanged emails 28 with counsel, read some press reports, received a five-page summary of the case, and had a short 1 five or ten minute conversation in the hall with counsel which Ms. Bennett characterized as non-2 substantive. (Tr. 1440:21-1441:5)

3 When asked if she had ever retained a lawyer before, Ms. Bennett said that she “grew up 4 with lawyers.” (Tr. 1442:11) In her deposition she said, “Family members were judges. Family 5 members who were in legislature. Family members who had law firms. Family members who 6 are international tax lawyers.” (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex. B at 38:22-39:6) She also said she knew 7 what an engagement or retention letter was, but hadn’t signed one. (Tr. 1442:9-20) Her counsel 8 later explained to her, on the witness stand, that she had signed one. (Tr. 1449:11-22)

9 Ms. Bennett claimed to have a technology background and worked for Sun Microsystems 10 and Fidelity in some sort of technical capacity, and that she was currently doing consulting work.
11 (Tr. 1420:24-1421:11) When ask for more details at her deposition, she testified as follows:

12 Q. What kind of consulting work are you doing right now?

13 A. Technology, finance, gardening. I mean, you name it. I get calls a lot of 14 times, a lot of it’s technology work, a lot of it is information security work. This 15 time of year it’s tax work. Just things that people -- out of marketing for a former 16 employer that was looking at some affinity marketing for some sports groups, so it 17 varies. It’s very interesting but it varies.

18 Q. Can you give me an example of the work you've done relating to the 19 information security?

20 A. Well, talk about AT&T, e-mail, viruses, spam, Trojans, spam filters that are 21 not working, that are outsourced in Manila; Manila has bad weather, everything 22 goes down; that type of stuff.

23 (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex. B at 7:8-23)

24 Before the Court, when asked by her counsel what she understands “the case to be about,” 25 she said:

26 A. No, no, I’m trying to do this succinctly. It -- it becomes -- it -- I don’t want to call it 27 monopolistic behavior. I’ll call it restrictive behavior that becomes onerous the bigger the 28 company is, like the banks that are too big to fail. There’s some behavior that might have

1           been fine when Apple was very small. Or I worked in startup software companies that are 2           fine when you're little and you're trying to protect yourself where you're trying to protect 3           your activity, but as it gets bigger and bigger, it then shuts other users or other customers 4           out of a market and out of a use. And music, by and of itself, is owned in theory by the 5           people that wrote it, that composed it, that orchestrated it, that perform it. There's sync 6           licenses, there's mechanical licenses. There's a lot of -- so if someone says, "but we'll put 7           this in a file format that you can't use or listen to," that restricts not just the owner of the 8           iPod but the creative side, the -- you know, BMI and ASCAP and all the -- and there are 9           ways to manage licensing fees and -- and performance fees that I don't think this particular 10          execution of protections did any favors to the music world.

11         (Tr. 1429:18-1430:13)

12           Ms. Bennett testified both before the Court and in her deposition that her concern about 13          iPods was the "file format" used for music. In her testimony before the Court, she claimed that 14          there were "rare pieces of music" that were not available to put on her iPod, such as some 15          "Hungarian-formatted music." (Tr. 1424:8-1426:3) She said she was injured because some 16          music "wasn't in iTunes" so was not available "if I had wanted to buy it. So that cost me money 17          that rather than buying a track, one single, I ended up buying a whole CD." (Tr. 1429:5-1249:11)

18           Similarly, when asked during her deposition to explain what, in her view, Apple had done 19          wrong that warranted her suing Apple, she repeatedly said that Apple should have allowed DRM-20          free songs to be played on iPods. (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex. B at 26:18-28:23) It is a basic, 21          undisputed fact that iPods were always compatible with DRM-free songs from any source in a 22          wide array of file formats from their launch through the class period. (E.g., Noll Tr. 1162:18-23          1163:8; 1182:17-19; Murphy Tr. 1768:21-1769:5) The evidence at trial showed that, not only 24          was it possible, but the majority of music on iPods was DRM-free music ripped from CDs or 25          other sources. (Murphy Tr. at 1768:21-1769:9) Class counsel has never attempted to disprove 26          that it was possible or common for iPods to play DRM-free music.

27           When asked if Ms. Bennett would reconsider her participation in the lawsuit if she was 28          able to correct her misunderstanding of this underlying "fact" (that iPods would not play DRM-

BOIES, SCHILLER & FLEXNER LLP

1 free music) that Ms. Bennett found central to her claims, Ms. Bennett said:

2 Q. You wouldn't consider it at all?

3 A. No. Because from my point of view I don't think those facts are accurate and it's an 4 if, I know from experience in having worked with some very high level technology people 5 and music people, and people that were high level music executives at the very studios 6 you're talking about, I happen to know some of what was going on at that point.

7 (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex. B at Tr. 32:4-32:11)

8 When shown the press release announcing the very first iPod model, which explained that 9 the iPod was compatible a wide array of common music file formats, she testified as follows:

10 Q. And do you understand that since its introduction the iPod has supported all of those 11 file formats, MP3 --

12 A. I have no idea.

13 Q. Right. And my question is: What if it's true that it actually does support those file 14 formats and has ever since its introduction. Would that change your view at all about 15 anything that you've said today?

16 A. Yeah. Because if it's true nobody knew about it.

17 (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex B at 57:11-20)

18 ARGUMENT

19 I. MS. BENNETT IS NOT AN ADEQUATE REPRESENTATIVE.

20 Rule 23(a)(4) requires that “the representative parties will fairly and adequately protect 21 the interests of the class.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4). “Adequacy of representation is the key to the 22 integrity of class action litigation, not only in pragmatic terms of the efficiency and thoroughness 23 of the proceedings, but far more importantly in relation to the fair and just resolution of the 24 dispute. . . . the Court must be especially sensitive to insuring that the due process rights of the 25 absent parties are protected, since they will be bound by any final judgment. Any infirmities of 26 representation will thus result in a defect of constitutional dimensions.” Del Campo v. American 27 Corrective Counseling Serv’s, Inc., No. C 01-21151 JW (PVT), 2008 WL 2038047, at *4 (N.D.
28

1 Cal. May 12, 2008) (alterations in original) (quoting Folding Cartons, Inc. v. American Can Co., 2 79 F.R.D. 698, 701 (N.D. Ill. 1978)).

3 “Findings that a representative lacks sufficient interest, credibility, or either knowledge or 4 an understanding of the case—although a knowledge or understanding of all the intricacies of the 5 litigation is not required—are grounds for denying class certification. The analysis is intended ‘to 6 ensure that the parties are not simply lending their names to a suit controlled entirely by the class
 7 attorney.’” Monroe v. City of Charlottesville, Va., 579 F.3d 380, 385 (4th Cir. 2009) (quoting 7A
 8 Charles Alan Wright, Arthur R. Miller & Mary Kay Kane, FEDERAL PRACTICE & PROCEDURE § 9 1766 (3d ed. 2005)). “[A] class representative who is unfamiliar with the case will not serve the 10 necessary role of ‘check[ing] the otherwise unfettered discretion of counsel in prosecuting the 11 suit.’” Welling v. Alexy, 155 F.R.D. 654, 659 (N.D. Cal. 1994) (quoting Weisman v. Darneille, 78 12 F.R.D. 669, 671 (S.D.N.Y. 1978)); accord Burkhalter Travel Agency v. MacFarms Intern., Inc., 13 141 F.R.D. 144, 153 (N.D. Cal. 1991) (“a party who is not familiar with basic elements of its 14 claim is not considered to be an adequate representative for the class because there is no sense 15 that there is an actual party behind counsel’s prosecution of the action”).

16 Courts in this Circuit have rejected proposed class representatives who failed to show they 17 understood enough about the lawsuit to check class counsel. For example, in Bodner v. Oreck 18 Direct, LLC, Judge Hall Patel held:

19 In light of plaintiff’s undeniable and overwhelming ignorance regarding the nature 20 of this action, the facts alleged, and the theories of relief against defendant, the 21 court cannot conclude that he has met the threshold typicality or adequacy 22 requirements of Rule 23(a). It is clear from the record that plaintiff’s counsel, and not plaintiff, is the driving force behind this action. Such a ‘cart before the horse’ approach to litigation is not the proper mechanism for the vindication of legal rights.

23 No. C 06-4756 MHP, 2007 WL 1223777, *2 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 25, 2007); see also McPhail v. First 24 Command Fin. Planning, Inc., 247 F.R.D. 598, 612 (S.D. Cal. 2007) (“the Court finds the 25 Morrisons may not serve as class representatives because they ‘have little or no supervisory role 26 in the litigation and little knowledge of the underlying facts of the law suit’”) (quoting In re 27 DaimlerChrysler AG Sec. Litig., 216 F.R.D. 291, 299 (D. Del. 2003)); Rolex Employees Ret.
 28 Trust v. Mentor Graphics Corp., 136 F.R.D. 658, 666 (D. Or. 1991) (“Moreland has failed to 1 demonstrate that he has sufficient familiarity with this case or sufficient resources to allow him to 2 check the actions of counsel and truly serve as the representative of the proposed class”).

3 Counsel argues that “the threshold of knowledge required to qualify a class representative 4 is low.” (Mot. at 5) But if there is a “threshold of knowledge” that means anything, Ms. Bennett 5 does not meet it. Her sole knowledge of the case was from an online article, a 5-page summary 6 from counsel, and a 5 to 10 minute, non-substantive conversation with counsel in the hall prior to 7 her testimony. (Tr. 1440:21-1441:5)

8 In addition, Ms. Bennett’s understanding of the case was simply wrong. When asked by 9 her counsel on direct examination to explain what the case is about, Ms. Bennett could not 10 provide even a basic answer, but instead devolved into references to “sync licenses” and 11 “mechanical licenses,” “BMI and ASCAP,” and “ways to manage licensing fees and -- and 12 performance fees.” (Tr. 1429:18-1430:13)

13 Class counsel claims injury from alleged iPod overcharges; Ms. Bennett claims injury 14 because music she wanted was not on iTunes, requiring her to buy a CD. (Tr. 1429:5-1249:11 15 (“So that cost me money that rather than buying a track, one single, I ended up buying a whole 16 CD”))

17 Ms. Bennett firmly believes, and is attempting to sue Apple because, iPods were not able 18 to play DRM-free music. Counsel’s assertion that there was an attempt to “intimidate” Ms.
19 Bennett<sup>1</sup> on this issue is patently false. Ms. Bennett’s purported basis for suing Apple – that 20 iPods could not play DRM-free music – was based on a fundamental misunderstanding of the 21 facts. Ms. Bennett was asked whether there was source, other than the class lawyers, she trusted 22 who might help her better understand the truth about this issue, and if she was able to confirm the 23 truth, whether she would reconsider her suit. Rather than providing a straightforward answer, 24 Ms. Bennett said, variously:

25
26 _____
27 <sup>1</sup> By contrast, counsel for Plaintiffs asked Tim O’Neil, the Apple employee who pulled and 28 provided purchase receipts for iPods disclosed at trial as allegedly purchased by Ms. Rosen, whether he had been drinking or was on drugs, whether he’d ever been arrested, whether he’d ever been accused of lying at work, and for his annual salary. (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex. C at 8:18-21; 10:15-25)

- 1 • “I know from experience in having worked with some very high level technology

- 6 didn't),
- 7 • “amateur users and end users” would not know whether DRM-free music worked
- 8 on iPods (id. at 33:7-8) (in fact, it worked for millions of consumers);
- 9 • she “had firsthand experience where I know that's not true” (id. at 34:1-2); and
- 10 • only a “qualified expert who has been around that long and can testify to file
- 11 formats” would be able to say if it were true (id. at 69:11-12).

12 Similarly, Ms. Bennett claimed a great deal of familiarity with lawyers and the legal 13 process (Ringgenberg Decl. Ex. B at 38:22-39:6), and claimed to understand what a retention or 14 engagement letter was (Tr. 1442:9-20), but she did not know that she had actually signed one 15 until her lawyer told her so on the witness stand (Tr. 1449:11-22).

16 Ms. Bennett has not demonstrated that she has the knowledge or ability to check counsel.
 17 Her appointment would insure that this case will continue to be, as it has been, driven and 18 controlled by lawyers unguided by a client. Protecting the interests of absent class members 19 requires more.

20 II. MS. BENNETT'S SUBSTITUTION IS TOO LATE TO PROVIDE THE COURT
 21 JURISDICTION OR PROTECT THE INTERESTS OF THE ABSENT CLASS
 22 MEMBERS.

23 The “Due Process Clause of course requires that the named plaintiff at all times 24 adequately represent the interests of the absent class members.” Phillips Petroleum Co. v. Shutts, 472 U.S. 797, 812 (1985).

25 Here, the prior class representatives had no claim and no standing. That was true, by their 26 own admission, at the very least from November and December 2013, when Dr. Noll's revised 27 damages calculations stated that there were no damages from purchases of iPod Classic Fifth 28 Generation models, which are the only models that Ms. Wilson (formerly Tucker) and Ms. Rosen

1 allegedly purchased in the class period. (Nov. 25, 2013 Noll Report, Ex. 5-A and 5-B (revised 2 “Apple Reseller Sales Damages Models” and “Apple Direct Sales Damages Models”); Dec. 18, 3 2013 Noll Dep. at 62:3-9)

4 This class action was a captainless ship, without any adequate class representative and 5 steered only by the class counsel from, at the very least, late 2013 through the middle of the trial 6 and, ironically, until the middle of the trial testimony of the expert, Dr. Noll, who concluded that 7 the prior named plaintiffs had no damages. (Noll Tr. 1212: 8-21; TX 757)

8 Apple previously argued that, as a result of the lack of standing of the named plaintiffs, 9 the Court lacked Article III jurisdiction. (Dkt. 955 at ECF p. 7-12; Dkt. 972 at ECF p. 5-16) As 10 the Court has ruled on that point, Apple merely reiterates and reserves it here.

11 Even setting Article III jurisdiction aside, the lack of a class representative who was 12 adequate or had standing meant that the absent class members were entirely dependent on the 13 unchecked conduct of counsel during the year leading up to trial. There was no constitutionally 14 required adequate representation “at all times” and thus Ms. Bennett’s substitution now cannot 15 salvage the class case. Shutts, 472 U.S. at 812; accord Hesse v. Sprint Corp., 598 F.3d 581, 588– 16 89 (9th Cir. 2010) (Due Process requires that the named plaintiff provide adequate representation 17 to the class “at all times”).

18 Ms. Bennett argues that the Court should ignore these problems because, she says, Apple 19 should have raised them sooner. But the absent class members’ Due Process rights are not 20 Apple’s to waive. It is the class counsel who has a fiduciary duty to the class, not Apple. If there 21 is any fault in not addressing this issue, it lies with them.

22 III. MS. BENNETT CANNOT ADEQUATELY REPRESENT RESELLERS.

23 As Apple showed in its motion to decertify, a consumer plaintiff cannot adequately 24 represent resellers for several reasons, including because, by Plaintiff’s own theory, consumers 25 and resellers have inconsistent theories of injuries and damages, which means that a consumer is 26 atypical and unrepresentative of resellers due to differences in injury and damages. (Dkt. 888 at 27 ECF p. 15-23) In light of the Court’s prior ruling rejecting those points, Apple merely reiterates 28 and reserves them here.

1 IV. MS. BENNETT’S ADDITION MID-TRIAL IS HIGHLY PREJUDICIAL.

2 Ms. Bennett seeks to be added as a class representative under Federal Rule of Civil 3 Procedure 15(a)(2) or, alternatively, to intervene permissively under Rule 24(b). (Mot. at 6)

4 Prejudice is the “most critical” of the Rule 15 factors. Soto v. Castlerock Farming and 5 Transport, Inc., No. 1:09-cv-00701 AWI JLT, 2011 WL 3489876, at *5 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 2011); 6 accord Osakan v. Apple Am. Group, No. C 08-4722, 2010 WL 1838701, at *4 (N.D. Cal. May 5, 7 2010); Pub. Citizen, Inc. v. Mukasey, No. C08-0833MHP, 2008 WL 4532540, at *4 (N.D. Cal.
8 Oct. 9, 2008) (“prejudice is the touchstone of the inquiry under rule 15(a) and carries the greatest 9 weight”) (quotation marks omitted). Prejudice also supports denial of a motion under Rule 24.
10 See Harris v. Vector Marketing Corp., No. C-08-5198 EMC, 2010 WL 3743532, at *5 (N.D. Cal.
11 Sept. 17, 2010).

12 Ms. Bennett argues that Apple would not be prejudiced by mid-trial addition of a plaintiff 13 because she “has sat for both an evidentiary hearing and deposition” and produced documents.
14 (Mot. at 9) In fact, Ms. Bennett produced a single document, a purchase receipt, at 6:43 pm the 15 night before her testimony, and a single other document, a partial copy of a credit card statement, 16 at her hearing. (Tr. at 1432:23-25 (“Ms. Bernay: That's correct. I just received it from Ms.
17 Bennett. And this was a copy of the copy that she had which is in fact cut off. So I apologize for 18 that. And we should be able to -- if Mr. Isaacson wants to go online and get a cleaner copy, but I 19 did want to at least have this before the Court.”)) Despite counsel’s statement, she has never 20 produced a full copy of her credit card statement, online or otherwise.

21 Further, Apple has had no opportunity to investigate adequately any individual issues 22 regarding Ms. Bennett, and certainly not the investigation it completed for the other named 23 plaintiffs. The class certification motion explained, by contrast, that “all three proposed class 24 representatives have already given day-long depositions, have submitted their iPods for a forensic 25 inspection by Apple’s counsel, and have produced voluminous (and needlessly intrusive)
26 documentation to Apple as part of the discovery process, including: copies of all music files 27 stored on their personal computers; copies of their iTunes Purchase history; iTunes account 28

1 names and passwords; copies of receipts documenting their iPod purchases from Apple; and lists
2 of every compact disc they currently own.” (Dkt. 486 at ECF p. 22)

3 Ms. Bennett notes that Apple declined the offer of a short continuance at trial, but that 4 offer presented a Hobson’s choice: prejudice by disrupting trial preparation and risking witness 5 unavailability (and fear of losing jurors to the holiday season) or prejudice by limiting possible 6 investigation of Ms. Bennett. And in any event, a delay would not have permitted anything like 7 the investigation that would have been allowed had Ms. Bennett showed up during discovery.
8 That is prejudice either way.

9 Courts repeatedly find prejudice warranting denial of motions to add class representatives 10 where the motions were filed shortly before or after the close of discovery, let alone in the middle 11 of trial. In Soto, for example, the named plaintiffs brought a motion to add representatives while 12 discovery was still ongoing, but two years after “Defendant argued against their ability to act as 13 class representatives.” 2011 WL 3489876, at *4. Despite the fact that the defendant had already 14 taken a limited deposition of the proposed new class representative, the court denied the motion 15 to add him as a class representative because it “would unduly prejudice Defendant, because 16 Defendant has been preparing arguments and defenses based upon the identity of the class 17 representatives who have been named since 2009.” Id. at *6–7. Similarly, in Osakan, the court 18 concluded that adding “four new class representatives” a month before the scheduled trial date 19 “will unduly prejudice Defendants, who have been preparing their defense based on the identity 20 of the class representative—Mr. Osakan—who is identified in the original complaint as well as 21 the amended complaint.” 2010 WL 1838701, at *5. And in In re Flash Memory Antitrust Litig., 22 No. C 07-0086 SBA, 2010 WL 2332081 (N.D. Cal. June 9, 2010), the court denied a request to 23 add class representatives even before the court had ruled on class certification because it “would 24 require Defendants to conduct new and/or additional discovery that would not otherwise have 25 been required had Plaintiffs joined the appropriate representatives in the first instance.” Id. at 26 *17. The same result follows in this case, where the proposed addition of a class representative is 27 even later and the prejudice even stronger.
