BIOGRAPHY

After 42 years of service, Mr. Collins retired from Shearman & Sterling LLP. During his years of practice, he served as a government policymaker, a law school faculty member, and a private practitioner. Mr. Collins worked in all aspects of competition law, but he focused primarily on the defense of mergers, acquisitions, and joint ventures before competition agencies throughout the world. He was also actively involved in a number of antitrust litigations in the United States as well as investigations conducted by the European Commission and other agencies.

Mr. Collins joined Shearman & Sterling in 1978. In 1981, he served as a White House fellow and special assistant to then-Vice President George H.W. Bush. Thereafter, Mr. Collins served as a special assistant and later deputy assistant attorney general in the Antitrust Division of the United States Department of Justice under William F. Baxter.

Between 1991 and 1995 and again in 2014, Mr. Collins was an adjunct faculty member at Yale Law School, where he taught the main antitrust course as well as several specialized antitrust courses. Between 2010 and 2020, he taught antitrust law at the New York University School of Law. Since 2016, Mr. Collins has been teaching at the Georgetown University Law Center.

Mr. Collins conceived and served as editor-in-chief of Issues in Competition Law and Policy, a three-volume treatise that comprehensively surveys the issues facing modern competition law in the United States, Europe and around the world. For 15 years, he served as a committee chair, council member and officer in the ABA Section of Antitrust Law and he has chaired the antitrust and trade regulation committee of New York City Bar.
